DOUGLAS, Ariz., April 25.—Two hundred and sixty-five Americans are bottled up at Cananea Sonora with rioting Mexicans in control of the situation. Many left there yesterday on a special train ordered by Charles Montague, the American consular agent, but today he was informed that no mort cars wire available.

MADRID, April 25.—"Mexicans will unite and fight to their last breath against American invasion."

This is the keynote of a dispatch received by the Spanish Press Association today from Venustiano Carranza, the Constitutionalist leader in Mexico, today. It was sent from Chihuahua, and General Carranza requested that it be transmitted to all newspapers. In the dispatch he protested against the American occupation of Vera Cruz and asserted that many of the 17,000 Spanish residents of Mexico would join the Mexican army to resist troops of the United States.

The protected cruiser Chicago was ordered into commission today by a radiogram from Washington. This ship has been used by the Massachusetts Naval Reserves. All the naval prisoners at the Charlestown Navy Yard—140 in number—were transferred to the cruiser which started at once for Portsmouth, N. H.

AMERICANS KILLED BY MOBS IN MEXICO CITY

WASHINGTON, APRIL 25.—THE STATE DEPARTMENT TODAY RECEIVED WORD THAT 125 AMERICAN WOMEN AND CHILDREN HAD BEEN TAKEN OFF A TRAIN AT IRAPUATA, MEXICO, BY FEDERAL SOLDIERS. ANOTHER TELEGRAM RECEIVED FROM MONTEREY ASKS ASSISTANCE FOR 200 AMERICANS WHO ARE IN DESPERATE CIRCUMSTANCES THERE.

VERA CRUZ, April 25.—Four Americans have been killed in Mexico City, according to aicircumstantial dispatch printed in El Dictamen, a Mexican newspaper here. Many more are in peril, and Huerta's plan seems to be to hold all Americans now in his territory as hostages.

Seven Americans and one Englishman have been arrested by Huerta's orders and ordered to be shot, according to a report sent Secretary of State Bryan from here. These men are Superintendent W. Mengum, Engineer Elliott and Conductors Riley and Hart of the Mexican National Railway, Edward Wunsch and his son Sydney, and A. M. Turner. The Englishman is named Boyd.

Dispatches from Mexico City, filtering through obscure sources, say that the foreigners there are dreading Sunday.

BULLETINS

VERA CRUZ, April 25.—American marines are reported to have been landed at Tampico to protect the 2,000 refugees there from harm during the battle of the opposing Mexican forces for the possession of the city. Rear Admiral Badger received a wireless dispatch from Rear Admiral Mayo at Tampico early today and immediately forwarded it to Washington. Great activity was immediately shown on the American warships in and outside the harbor.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The War Department today received word from Naco, Arizona, that the Americans are being driven out of Cananea, where the Cananea copper mines are situated. An appeal was made for 300 rifles, as the State of Sonora, in which Cananea is situated, is in the hands of the rebels.

PANAMA, April 25.—Martial law went into effect along the Panama Canal today. One hundred and fifty soldiers patrolled the Gatun, Miraflores and Pedro Miguel locks by orders of Colonel Goethals. There had been rumors from time to time of a plot to blow up the locks. All Mexicans employed on the canal work will be detailed to tasks away from the immediate vicinity of the locks.

TOKIO, April 25.—Japan today gave its pledge to maintain a strict "hands-off" policy in connection with the difficulty in which Mexico and the United States are involved. Count Shigenobu Okuma, the Premier, announced that the Japanese government would not utilize the Mexican trouble to secure from the United States a solution of the California controversy or other matters at issue.

Give Details of Murder at Capital

Charge Nelson O'Shaughnessy, with his personal party, came through safely from Mexico City. Though he was strictly silent as to occurrences in Mexico City, the memebrs of his party told sorrowful stories of Americans held captive there or in towns along the route.

El Dictamen, the paper which prints the report of the murder of four Americans, is circumstantial in its statements. According to the account, three of the victims were taken from street cars in the Mexican capital and

AMERICAN TO PRINT WAR EXTRAS TOMORROW

BAY STATE MILITIAMEN SLEEP IN ARMORIES; OFFICERS PLAN TO MOVE SOON

United States bluejackets in a practice charge over the hills at Guantanamo, Cuba, showing how they put the Mexicans to flight during the invasion of Vera Cruz.

WALSH CONFERS ON MOBILIZATION SITE

Governor Walsh today met a committee of four officers for a conference before making final choice of a site to mobilize the State militia. The committee in its preliminary report favored Lakeville.

The Governor was busy today with final plans for mobilization at a moment's notice. He received word from the War Department that the department could supply 9,000 overcoats and pairs of shoes to fill the shortage in militia equipment. The department can furnish no packs at present.

The committee on mobilization named by the Governor includes Colonel Frank P. Williams, surgeon-general; Colonel Frank F. Cutting of the Fifth Infantry; Major Christopher Harrison of the engineering corps; and Major John F. Hosmer, U. S. A. In their preliminary report on a camp site, they said:

"Camp sites at Lakeville are ample in area with good water supply and two miles from the railroad. It is especially suitable because of the good roads from the railroad to the camp site. The only difficulty is, the camp is located near the water supply of the city of Taunton. We have already made arrangements with the engineer of the water board of Taunton to make a special report to the Governor."

SLEEP IN ARMORIES.

"We then went to Westfield. We find the campground at Westfield unsuitable because of the character of the soil and because of its nearness to Holyoke, Westfield and Springfield, all of which have license and other evils.

"We therefore recommend the Lakeville camp site."

With conference today, everything is practically ready for mobilization.

Many of the men are sleeping in the armories so as to be on hand when the call is received, and the others are within easy calling distance.

Governor Walsh is desirous of having the Massachusetts men make the best showing of any State in the Union, both in their quick response to arms and in appearance. Most of today will be taken up in putting the companies on a war footing. The Second Brigade, composed of the Second, Fifth and Ninth Regiments, will probably be the one requisitioned. This is the result of the trip several Governor made to Washington. He will command the Massachusetts outfit.

Company commanders were today said to have been carrying out secret instructions in recruiting their companies to the required State strength. The State standard is below that of the nation, and as yet it is not certain whether a 105-man or a 150-man company will be required.

GOVERNOR ON ALERT.

The Governor has established night headquarters so that he can be reached at any hour of the night as well as day and the executive staff offices at the State House equipments are being worked over and new requisitions prepared.

Approximately $60,000 is available for the purchase of supplies for the Massachusetts men, the majority of whom will have to take the field wearing the old blue uniform overcoat and "rolls" instead of the regulation drab overcoat and "packs."

There is also a serious shortage of shoes, which Adjutant-General Pearson says is due to an oversight on the part of the authorities at Washington. He declares the regular Army marching shoe is unfit for use.

Overcoats sufficient for all be secured, were on hand, and his requisition for packs had been forwarded to Washington months ago.

PEARSON'S STATEMENT.

"The only difference is that our men's overcoats are blue, excepting some 2,600 of the latest issue, which are the regulation drab," he said. "This comes from the fact that some three years ago the war department discarded overcoats for field service, and adopted sweaters. They now seem to be changing back to overcoats, which accounts for the technical shortage. But the men noon Monday. have plenty of good blue overcoats which would answer the purpose.

"Major Charles T. Cahill, an expert in such matters, with Brigadier-General Sweetser and Brigadier-General Emery, have had this shoe question in hand for months past. I have been advised that the new issue of marching shoes are made on a different last, while the old-style shoe hurt the men's feet."

COAST ARTILLERY READY.

Should the regular coast artillery be called for service with the mobile army as infantry and withdrawn from the forts in Boston Harbor they would make a very formidable force, as every company is up to war strength and each is fully officered. The companies and their present stations are:

7th Company at Fort Banks.
9th Company, Fort Warren.
46th Company, Fort Strong.
59th Company, Fort Andrews.
83d Company, Fort Strong.
96th Company, Fort Revere.
126th Company, Fort Strong.
141th Company, Fort Andrews.
149st Company, Fort Strong.
152d Company, Fort Andrews.
153d Company, Fort Banks.
Members of the Coast Artillery Corps expect to be called upon to man the forts in Boston Harbor if the regular coast artillerymen are equipped as infantry and sent into Mexico, as is said to be the plan of the authorities at Washington. Colonel Walter E. Lombard of Arlington, commander of the corps, said today that his men were able to take charge of Forts Strong, Andrews and Warren, where they already have handled the big 16-inch guns and mortars.

MAY CALL NAVAL BRIGADE.

It was rumored today that the Naval Brigade would be called upon to man the Navy Yard. Captain Daniel M. Goodridge stated, however, that he had not heard anything officially that would confirm these rumors.

"We are recruiting the companies," said he, "and of course upon call, we are ready for any service which may be needed."

The men of the 1st squadron of cavalry are fully prepared for duty. While only part of the squadron have mounts, all the men, with the exception of a few of the recruits, are able to ride well.

The field artillery of the Massachusetts Militia is likely to be among the first troops of the Commonwealth called upon to perform active service in Mexico, according to officers of the National Guard, who point out the lack of field pieces in the regular Army. There are only two fully equipped regiments in the entire United States forces.

Members of Battery A, with headquarters in the South Armory, are enthusiastic over the possibilities of their organization being called to the front.

KILPATRICK LEADS TRANSPORTS ON WAY TO VERA CRUZ

By CHARLES MICHAELSON.

Staff correspondent of the International News Service. On board the International News Service dispatch boat Senator Bailey, April 25, by wireless to Galveston, Tex.

The army transports carrying General Funston's Fifth Brigade to Mexico are proceeding rapidly today. A strong northeast gale is blowing, according a welcome relief from the rain ad fog in evidence when we steamed from Galveston harbor yesterday morning.

Morning inspection was held on board the transports and the regular routine duties were performed.

The Kilpatrick, with General Funston aboard is leading the transports with the Sumner, McClellan and Meade following. The torpedo boats Pioneer, Preston and Reid convoys are a mile ahead of the larger vessels.

Former Tentmate Pays Tribute to Corporal Haggerty

Of the flood of letters of sympathy received by members of the family of Corporal Daniel A. Haggerty, first to lay down his life in the encounter with the Mexicans at Vera Cruz, none is more touching than one from A. G. Nirbier, his tentmate at Nicaragua in 1908. Nirbier has sailed on the battleship Virginia for New York.

"Danny Haggerty was my tentmate in Nicaragua in 1908," he wrote, "and but for him I would today be planted among the palm groves of that republic. I was hit by a native machete and he, being my tentmate, carried me back to health when the fever from my wounds made me delirious.

"In the eyes of the world no man can die a more honorable death than did my old tentmate, but I do not think that we are the greatest heroes in the time of war. The greatest heroes in my own nation are the sister, wife or sweetheart whom we leave behind. It is they who show true courage and heroism, because it is on their slender shoulders falls the brunt of war.

TROOP MOVEMENTS FOR THE PRESENT ARE ALL UNDER WAY

WASHINGTON, April 25.—"No more troops movements will be ordered today. I am informed that all troops which have been ordered to move now are under way," said Secretary of War Garrison today. "The Fourth cavalry will sail from Galveston today with all of the Fourth field artillery that can be spared aboard. The cavalry which is to go to Mexico has not been designated, but the cavalry which will be sent will be used only for scouting purposes," said the secretary.

Mr. Garrison said, he had received no news today from Laredo and no official confirmation of the reported execution of Americans in Mexico.

"Governor Hunt of Arizona is concentrating mobilizable State troops to reinforce the border, and is corresponding with Secretary Garrison concerning the plans according to Mr. Garrison.

"I can only say that Governor Hunt is corresponding with me about ordering out the State troops, and that the Governor has asked me what the war department can do in that event," said Secretary Garrison. "Whether Governor Hunt has actually determined to call out the State troops I cannot say at this time."

Governor Colquitt of Texas, telegraphed me today asking whether there is any way in the war department an pay the expenses of the State troops that Colquitt has ordered along the border. I will inform him that the war department cannot pay such expenses while the troops are State troops."

MORE "SNIPING" AT VERA CRUZ DURING NIGHT; NO ONE HURT

WASHINGTON, April 25.—There was shooting in three sections of Vera Cruz last night, causing much excitement and alarm among the residents, according to a dispatch to the Navy Department today from Admiral Fletcher.

"All efforts to re-establish civil government in Vera Cruz have been unsuccessful," Admiral Fletcher reported, "although we have made every effort to persuade the Federal and State officials to continue in office."

"The City Council met and considered the proclamation issued by me. The proclamation was fully explained to the council by a prominent lawyer. He assured them that the operation by patriotic citizens of Vera Cruz in order to secure resumption of all functions of their civil government by themselves for the preservation and protection of their own interests.

"The municipal authorities delayed final action and were inclined to favor withdrawal of American forces from the city a condition under which they would resume their official duties."

NEW YORK, LATEST DREADNAUGHT, SAILS FOR MEXICO TOMORROW

NEW WYORK, April 25. The superdreadnought New York, flying the flag of Rear Admiral Cameron McR. Winslow, will sail for Newport, R. I., from the Brooklyn navy yard tomorrow morning. After being fitted out with torpedo tubes at Newport the superdreadnaught will lead a "flying squadron" into Mexican waters.

MANAGER'S WIFE IS ONE THOUGHT SLAIN

CHICAGO, April 25.—Several Americans are believed today either to have been executed or are about to be executed by Huerta's soldiers in the vicinity of Mxico City.

An Englishman is also xpected to share their fate.

The men believed to be doomed, according to a telegram from Secretary of State Bryan, are:

Superintendent W. enMgum, Engineer Elliott and Conductors Riley and Hart of the eMxican National Railway, Edward Wunsch and his son Sydney, and A. M. Turner, secretary of the Haicienda Motzorongo, all Americans. The Englishman for whom gravest fears are felt is named Boyd.

Bryan Fears Executions

The text of Bryan's telegram, which was sent to Dr Herbert A. Parkyn in Chicago, president of a Mexican plantation company, reads:

The following, dated April 24, at 10 a. m., and received from the American consul at Vera Cruz, is sent for your information:

Am just reliably informed at 8 o'clock Tuesday night soldiers stopped train in vicinity of Tierra Blanca on Vera Cruz-Isthmus Railroad, taking following prisoners:

W. Mengum, railroad superintendent; Elliott, engineer; Riley and Hart, conductors. All are Americans. THESE PERSONS ARE TAKEN TO CORDOBA OR ORIZABA AND BELIEVED ORDERED SHOT.

Some eighteen or more Americans left for Tierra Blanca, C. B. Herron, secretary Isthmus Railroad, wife and four children; O. Cook, chief engineer; John F. Lighter, conductor; J. F. Lampen and wife; Kerwin, engineer, and Mr. and Mrs. George Macomber.

Same soldiers stopped at Haciendia Motzorongo, on same railroad, taking prisoners Edward Wunsch and son Sydney, A. M. Turner, secretary of the Hacienda Mottorongo, all Americans; also a man named Boyd, British subject. All taken to Cordoba or Orizaba. It is reliably stated that these prisoners may be executed.

Admirals Fletcher and Badger have this information before them.

PLEADS TO SAVE CAPTIVES.

Edward Wunsch, who is named in the dispatch, is manager of the plantation, which is a $3,000,000 concern. The stockholders are British and Americans. There are about 1,500,000 of them.

The "Mr. Boyd" named is believed to be Alexander Boyd, an aged Englishman, who was cashier at the plantation.

Dr. Parkyn, after receiving the message, sent another back to Washington urging the State Department to spare no money in efforts to rescue the prisoners if there is any chance that they are still alive. In a statement to the press Dr. Parkyn said:

"I fear for the worst. Our plantation is in an isolated position between Cordoba and Tierra Blanca. It has been in operation eight years and during the revolutions in Mexico we have frequently been obliged to pay tribute to each of the contending forces.

"Our policy has been to make no complaints, although we had a telegraph line passing through the plantation. Sometimes the Federals and sometimes the rebels would take possession of the plantation for a day or so. They have generally confined themselves to seizing horses or whatever money happened to be in the safe and have never attempted to harm the workers.

"Conditions have been growing worse, however, and when Mr. Turner left Chicago two weeks ago I had a long talk with him and advised him that if there was fresh trouble he should get all the white people together and leave for the coast. He said he was not afraid, but I gave him strict orders to leave at the first sign of danger.

"Now it seems they all may have lingered until they have been murdered. The dispatch indicates to my mind that there must be strong reason for believing they have been shot, which would be nothing less than murder, as they have taken no part in the war.

"Shortly before I received the telegram from Secretary Bryan, I received a letter written about a week ago from Mr Turner. He said things were going all right and he believed he would be able to wind up the season's sugar crop without trouble.

"I had previously received a cablegram from him last Friday, announcing his arrival. When the war developments came this week I wired Consul Canada on Tuesday giving him the names of the employes at the plantation and urging that every thing possible be done to safeguard them. The consul replied:

"All well at present. Will do everything possible."

"That was the last word I received until the message telling of the probable fate of the men came. There are several persons who were at the plantation who are not mentioned in the dispatch from Washington.

HUERTA OUTRAGE.

"Mr. Wunsch had his wife at the plantation and no mention is made of her or of two men named Peckham and Andrews, both Californians. I received a letter from Mr Boyd, our cashier, last week in which he mentioned being in frequent communication with the British Consul and he said the consul was fully informed of conditions at the plantation.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the outrage is due to Huerta's men who were stirred by the reports of war with America. There has been considerable feeling in the district against Americans for some time, but this was generally shown by making raids upon property and not by attacks on individuals.

"It puzzles to know why the railroad men should have been attacked unless it is all a part of an anti-American movement."

FUNSTON!

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

NEVER any style about him, not imposing on parade;
Couldn't make him look heroic with no end of golden braid.
But he's always movin' forward when there's trouble on ahead.
Five foot five o' nerve an' darin', eyes pale blue an' steely bright,
Not afraid of men or devils—that is Funston in a fight.

FIGHTER since he learned to toddle, soldier since he got his growth;
Knows the Spaniard and the savage—for he's fought and licked 'em both.
Not much figure in the ballroom, not much hand at breakin' hearts,
Rotten ringer for Apollo, but right there when something starts.
Just a bunch of brain and muscle, but you always feel, somehow,
That he'll get what he goes after when he mixes in a row.

WEYLER found out all about him, set a price upon his head;
Aguinaldo's crafty warriors filled him nearly full o' lead.
Yellow men and yellow fever tried to cut off his career.
But since first he hit the war-trail it has never slipped a gear.
And the heart of all the nation gives a patriotic throb
At the News that Kansas Fuston has again gone on his job.

Scores of Americans Held Up

slain, while the fourth, a young man, was killed in the Y. M. C. A. building after an argument with players on a baseball team to which he belonged.

The few American refugees coming through from Mexico City, and the Mexicans who straggle into Vera Cruz, tell of many Americans held along the line—either in jail, or forbidden to attempt to leave town.

General Maas and his forces is said to be encamped about twenty miles inland along the line to Vera Cruz. His men search every train that comes through from Mexico City. Americans by the score have been taken off and detained, with no word of what fate to expect.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The Navy Department has received from San Diego a telegram from Lieutenant Jensen, commander of the Cheyenne, saying that his ship had arrived at Ensenada, Lower California, and that the populace were greatly excited when they saw the destroyer enter the harbor. Mexican troops were hurriedly stationed to resist an expected landing. He says that the commanding general has guaranteed the safety of Americans on shore. He reports that fifty Americans desire transportation north.

200 ACCEPTED HERE FOR UNCLE SAM'S SERVICE

During the week more than 200 men have been accepted at Boston recruiting offices for service in the various branches of Uncle Sam's defences. The majority of the men have found berths in the navy, while a few have taken a little less than half, with the marine corps securing the remainder.

Captain William H. Parker, in charge of the marines recruiting office, sent a squad of men in uniform about the city distributing cards and answering questions regarding the service. Sergeant Cynan aroused much patriotism among the market men. Several of the white overalled and white jacketed men reported to the offices and were given information regarding the service.

The marines are bearing the brunt of the fight now and orders from Washington are to secure all the recruits possible.

Captain Roth, in charge of the army station on Tremont row, has examined more applicants during the past few days than applied during the entire month of March.

"I need not say that we are always at our dear country's service, in whatever need she may have. And I am ready at a moment's notice either to cancel my engagements or return at once. Your humble servant,

"April 25, 1914. W. CARDINAL O'CONNELL."

A great crowd gathered on the pier at Charlestown today as the cardinal sailed for Rome on the Canopic. A snapshot of a few of the friends with the cardinal is here given. Reading from the right they are: Pio de Luca, Dr. F. X. Mahoney, William J. Dooley, Joseph F. O'Connell, a nephew of the cardinal; Henry V. Cunningham, John J. Kirwin, Mayor Curley, Cardinal O'Connell, Daniel L. Prendergast, Joseph H. O'Neil, Dr. J. R. Slattery, T. J. Falvey, John Bruen.

CARDINAL SAILS ON VISIT TO THE PONTIFF

As the White Star liner Canopic swung out from her Charlestown pier this morning, on her voyage to Naples, a great crowd lined the waterfront to cheer farewell to Cardinal O'Connell as he stood at the ship's rail, waving back the salute with a silk American flag.

Going with the Cardinal to Rome are: Monsignor Splaine, D. D., rector of the cathedral, and Rev. Father Coppinger, rector of St. Augustine's, South Boston.

Gathered at the dock to wish "Bon Voyage" to Boston's Cardinal-Archbishop, were large delegations of prominent citizens, members of the Cathedral Guild and of the Catholic Union of Boston, Bishop Anderson, Monsignor Supple and many of the clergy of the archdiocese ,and a large number of ladies and children to all of whom the Cardinal gave his blessing.

Included among the body of citizens were: Mayor Curley, Ex-Governor Curtis Guild, Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald, Joseph H. O'Neil, James E. Cotter, William J. Dooley, Dr. F. X. Mahoney, Peter Porter, Daniel L. Prendergast, Christopher I. Fitzgerald, Dr. W. A. Dunn, Dr. J. R. Slattery and members of the staff of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Edward J. O'Connell, Pio di Luca, John Bowen, State Treasurer Mansfield, Timothy J. Falvey, Henry V. Cunningham, John J. Kirwin, and many others prominent in the social and business circles of the city.

In an impromptu reception held on the upper boat deck a few minutes before the steamer sailed, the Cardinal said that he hoped to leave Hamburg for Boston on the S. S. Cleveland on August 8.

He is going, he said, in performance of his obligation in this year to place before Pope Pius on account of his stewardship in the last five years.

The year just closed he regarded as filled with some of the most important events of his episcopate.

The great Church Congress, which displayed so wonderfully the unity and growth of the church in America, the marvellous response made to his appeal for funds for the St. Elizabeth Hospital, the splendid retreats of the men of the Holy Name Society at the Cathedral and, most impressive of all, the scene he witnessed at the Church of the Imaculate Conception a few Sundays ago, when 3,000 men approached the altar rail for Holy Communion, all combined to make a record of church activity about which it will be his happiness to tell the Pope.

"I am taking over a photograph of that grand Sunday morning scene at the Immaculate Conception Church," said the Cardinal, "to show to the Holy Father. I know it will delight him to see it.

"By the way," continued the Cardinal, "this American flag I hold has an interesting history. It was sent to me by Fr. O'Reilly of Lawrence. When Pius X. was elected Pope eleven years ago, a party of pilgrims from America who were in Rome had this flag withthem.

"As Pope Pius came to the balcony at St. Peter's to give his first blessing to the vast throng that was kneeling on the plaza of St. Peter, the first flag to meet his gaze was this American flag which was being waved a greeting to him by the visitors from America. I am taking it back to him now and I shall remind him of the incident associated with it."

REFUGEES TAKEN FROM TRAIN, REPORTED SLAIN

The following description of conditions in Mexico City is a translation of code dispatches sent from the Mexican capital to the International News Service—in order to get through the censor's hands they first were sent to London, the censorship over dispatches to England being less strict than that on dispatches to the United States which have practically been cut off.

MEXICO CITY, via London, April 25.—General Huerta is still in control in the Mexican capital, but outbreaks continue.

Thirty-five Mexican rioters, who were arrested by Rurales, have been executed. Death sentence was imposed upon these men by special decree from Huerta not so much because they showed anti-Foreign hostility as because they took advantage of the present fevered state of the public mind to make an anti-Huerta manifestation.

Foreign residents are now cooped up in the concentration zones. Some Americans have sought the protection of British and French flags.

HUERTA PLANS STRONG DEFENCE.

Huerta has begun preparations on a large scale for the defence of this city. Artillery is being placed at the approaches which would necessarily be traversed in the event of a campaign against the capital. The flower of the army is being mustered.

Huerta has sent envoys to all the rebel camps, declaring that Mexico has been invaded without warrants. A call is made to the patriotism of rebels whom Huerta but recently denounced as outlaws, robbers and bandits.

Huerta is playing for time. Aside from recalling his diplomatic envoy from Washington and tendering passports to the American charge d'affaires, Nelson O'Shaughnessy, he has done nothing officially to declare a state of war between Mexico and the United States.

The dictator has addressed notes to the foreign governments, complaining that the United States violated the lawful code of nations in seizing Vera Cruz. But even the warmest supporters of General Huerta realise that Mexico would be without foreign support if war were declared.

The ammunition factories of the government are working night and day, but Huerta's war equipment is pitifully inadequate when compared with the resources of the United States already in Mexico.

The financial plight of the dictator is hopeless. His chief sources of income were from the Vera Cruz custom house, the cable company and the Inter-Oceanic Railway. With Vera Cruz in possession of the Americans, all three sources of income have been cut off, as the custom house has been seized along with the cable company, and the Inter-Oceanic Railway is practically out of commission.

FRANTIC APPEAL BY PRESS.

The departure of Mr. O'Shaughnessy was followed by an attempt to burn the United States embassy. The Mexican police on duty were seen in the streets playing cards when incendiaries applied the torch. Several arrests were made, but the prisoners were released later.

Of all the anti-American agitators the most radical is Jorge Huerta, son of the dictator. The younger Huerta had just been married and he rushed from the altar in all his wedding finery to haranegue a mob.

All Mexico City newspapers are carrying headlines and lurid stories directed against the Americans. The press, inspired by the government, is seeking by every means possible to arouse the people.

The best classes, however, have shown no evidence of hostility toward the United States. Many of them have left the capital.

Affairs in the concentration zones are in charge of Radalf De Kardoff, secretary of the German legation, and M. De Lefaivre, secretary of the French legation.

Senor J. M. Cardoso De Oliveira, the Brasilian minister, who will look after the diplomatic affairs of the United States in Mexico, has been assured by President Huerta that trains will be provided for Americans and other foreigners who wish to leave the capital.

Machine guns have been mounted upon the roof the the National Palace.

DREAD SUNDAY UPRISING.

Sunday is viewed with dread by the foreigners remaining in the city, for Sunday has always been a fateful day in Mexico City. It is generally that day which is chosen for a big demonstration of any kind, either friendly or hostile.

Huerta has given notice to the foreign diplomatic envoys that he will police the streets with armed troops, as it is a foregone conclusion that there would be widespread disorder.

Senor Bernardo J. Cologan, Spanish minister and dean of the diplomatic corps, has received instructions from his government to extend any protection necessary to foreigners.

Speaking to a group of German residents, Rear Admiral Baron Paul Von Hintze, the German minister, said: "In such times as these, when the people excited over the possibility of war, there is bound to be high feeling, but General Huerta has given assurances that foreigners will be protected and foreign property respected. In a city the size of this, there is bound to be a low class making up the rabble of the community. Members of this caste always seize an occasion of disorder or excitement to give vent to their spirit of ruffianism. But General Huerta has promised to arrest and punish any such rioters and looters will be shot.

APPEAL TO LATIN-AMERICANS.

"The German flag will be respected and any foreigners who remain here desiring its protection may have it.

General Huerta is making a crafty move in attempting to arouse the diplomatic envoys of the Latin-American nations. The dictator, upon several occasions within the past forty-eight hours, has declared publicly and with emphasis that the real object of the United States is "to seize all the territory lying between the Rio Grande and the Panama Canal." The dictator cherishes the secret hope that he may be able to embroil some of the Central American States.

Ordered to Coast Defence Exercises

Major E. Dwight Fullerton and Captain H. Stanley Cushing, C. A. C., have been ordered to take part in the joint coast defence exercises at Portress Monroe, Virginia, starting Monday. Major Benjamin B. Sledd will serve as president of the examining board for first-class gunners during Major Fullerton's absence.

NOTE REVEALS BOY AND GIRL SUICIDE PACT

PROVIDENCE, April 25.—A death pact was revealed today following the tragic suicide of Edwin W. Stillwell, a fifteen-year-old Technical High School student, who shot and killed himself on the altar of the Calvary Baptist Church. Twenty-four hours previous Miriam Francis Gleason, seventeen, shot and killed herself at her home because her parents had forbidden her to keep company with the boy.

A note, addressed to Thomas C. Leake of No. 374 Potter avenue, stepfather of young Stillwell, which was found near the body, told of the suicide agreement entered into by the boy and girl.

"I loved her and told her that if she died I would follow her," was one of the lines written by Stillwell to explain the motive for his act. Mrs. Leake collapsed upon hearing of the death of Miss Gleason. She is in a serious condition at her home today and has not been told of the suicide of her son.

The boy and girl had only known each other a month. They were introduced after she had left the Hope Street High School to become a student at Technical High and it was a case of love at first sight. Stillwell was welcomed at the Gleason home until the girl's father received a note that Miriam had not been at school when she should have been. Inquiry brought the fact that Stillwell had induced her to remain away so that they could go to a motion picture show. Several times this occurred, according to Mr. Gleason, and at last he ordered Stillwell to stay away from the house.

Stillwell and the girl were heartbroken. They agreed to die and Miss Gleason killed herself with a gun Stillwell is said to have given her. He learned of her death at the school and later went to the church that they both attended.

Several members of the choir were rehearsing as he entered. He walked to the pulpit, left the note to his step-father, fired two shots and fell dead on the pulpit steps.

Cowdray Asks Aid for Railway Men

LONDON, April 25.—A cabled appeal from the American manager of the Tehuantepec Railway led Lord Cowdray to visit the United States embassy to request protection for the foreign employes. According to the cablegram from the manager the Mexican authorities are threatening them with arrest and forbidding them to depart from Mexico.

COAL MINERS GIVE BATTLE TO SOLDIERS

DENVER, Colo, April 25.—A battle between strikers and nine guards were reported in progress at the Chandler mine, one hundred miles north of the Lugiow district and outside the strike zone in a telephone message received today. There were only eight mine guards on duty and the lives of one hundred employes and seventy-five women and children were endangered. The fight started early this morning and was still in progress at noon.

50,000 PAY HOMAGE TO COUNTRY AND FLAG AT DEMONSTRATION ON COMMON

MULTITUDE CHEERS PATRIOTIC SPEECHES

Fifty thousand men, women and children paid homage to the Stars and Stripes at the patriotic demonstration held on Boston Common at the suggestion of the Boston AMERICAN last night.

Fifty thousand, as closely huddled as bundles of wheat, gave unstinted vent to their patriotic fervor.

Fifty thousand throats bellowed defiance to Huerta and his kin and voiced their allegiance to the President, the nation and the flage.

CHEER HAGGERTY'S MEMORY.

They shouted a mighty eulogy for the heroes who died in this and other wars for the honor, the integrity and the preservation of the Union.

They yelled themselves hoarse in tribute to the men of the army and the navy.

They cheered as lustily as they did the revered names of Washington and Lincoln, the name of Daniel A. Haggerty, the brave Cambridge lad, who, unknown until his death in defence of his country, gained an enduring place on the scroll of martyrs, as the first to shed his blood in the latest strife.

It is doubtful if the city has ever witnessed a more notable and thrilling outdoor demonstration in the interests of patriotism and OLD GLORY.

If the hostile Mexicans could have looked upon that sea of faces and heard the determined zing of the lusty throats, would get a pretty vigorous idea of the indomitable spirit they have elected to fight.

VAST CONCOURSE CHEERS.

And it was finding that Boston, with its proud history, should have been the first city in the land thus publicly to indorse the nation and its forces in the field and to wish them Godspeed in their mission. It was fitting, too, that the expression of sentiment should have taken place on soil made sacred by countless memorable events and gatherings, not the least among which was the protest of the boys to the British red coats about their ruined coast.

The whole reservation reverberated with the plaudits of men and women and not a few children, who fairly stood on their toes at times the better to let loose the emotions that thrilled them. The spirit of charity and mercy for an oppressed race was a feature of the meeting.

The speakers recalled the loyalty and splendid examples of leaders of the past and of the sacrifices and unflinching courage of the men who gave their lives for their country. They did not feed their auditors with any themes of vengeance. Rather did they mellow the affair with exhortations of charity and humanitarianism toward the Mexicans and this feeling of mercy was exhibited by the crowd. Yet with it was the smouldering purpose to demand justice and respect for the Flag above all else, and at any price.

Judge Leverett's quotation of the well-known passage, "My country, right or wrong," brought a storm of applause. It was a big, sober audience, come on serious business, a concourse that described by former Congressman Robert O. Harris, who presided, when he said, at the close: "I couldn't believe so many fine-looking people would turn out on such short notice. And such a well-behaved, intelligent gathering. It is a credit to the city, and the AMERICAN deserves a lot of praise for arranging such an affair. It couldn't have been more successful or better attended."

GATHERED LIKE MAGIC.

Mayor Curley, who got an ovation, expressed his surprise at the size and tone of the assemblage in his opening remarks. Sergeant Trainor, who commanded the police detail, had nothing to do but keep the passage way clear leading to the Parkman music pavilion, which was the shrine of last night's patriotic celebration. Captain Canney said it was one of the biggest crowds he had ever seen drawn by a meeting. The fifty thousand is a police estimate.

The spectators were packed like sardines, forming a great standing mass of humanity that reached out under the trees until the limited vision of night failed to trace the edge of the circle, and with the brightly illuminated rostrum, with its flags and bunting, standing out like a lighted hub of a giant wheel.

The crowds gathered like magic. When Conductor W. F. Randall of Stone's brass band began the overture there was only a thin fringe of humanity in front, where the flags draped the entrance facing, when they began to come across the inclosure from every point of the compass. By 8 o'clock, when the speaking began, all one could see from the elevation was a sea of upturned faces reaching out to where they could only hear the music and join in the cheers.

FIFE AND DRUM CORPS

While the exercises were at their height the strains of a fife and drum corps were heard floating across the Common from the direction of the Public Garden. It was a delegation of Tech students with red and grey hats. They carried a big American flag and a lot of banners and transparencies and, in spite of the exuberance of college boys on such a junket, once arrived they were among the most attentive listeners and among the quickest to applaud.

The Tech students had scarcely taken up their position in the crowd when the sound of drums and bugles were heard on Tremont street. It was a host of newsboys, captained by "Happy," their King, who had entertained them in the sailing room of the AMERICAN ... a repast at the close of a record day of sales due to up-to-the-minute war news. They circled the crowd and joined in the cheers and traversed the downtown streets, where they got plenty of applause.

The newsboys had banners that made the crowd laugh. They read: "Down with the Mexican Athletes," "Three Cheers for Uncle Sam," and the "Stars and Stripes Forever." The one that made the biggest hit was "Will the U. S. Huerta? Well, We Reckon."

The Tech students had transparencies reading: "We'll Make Grease Out of the Greasers," "To H— with Huerta," and "Tech is Ready." All of which gave zest to the occasion and let it be known how strong and widespread is the current of thought in the United States just now.

CHEER CURLEY SPEECH.

The tremendous outpouring of citizens showed how eager the community was to give expression to patriotism and how pleased all classes and ages were to adopt the AMERICAN'S suggestion that a public meeting be held to emphasize the country's stand south of the Rio Grande, to uphold the colors and to give moral support and encouragement to the men who are fighting for the Nation's fair name.

Mayor Curley sounded a warning to the I. W. W. or any other class who dared traduce the country or its attitude in the present crisis. He told the crowd he wouldn't stand for it as the city's chief magistrate and his words were greeted by prolonged cheering.

Following an overture of patriotic tunes by the band, Mme. Wilhelmina Wright Calvert, soloist at Tremont Temple and a singer of national reputation, sang "The Star Spangled Banner," and the assembled thousands joined in the chorus. The heavens fairly rocked with the melody. Every man and boy bared his head. Even the youngster whose grand-daddy, a Civil War veteran, brought him from the South End with a flag, ripped the elastic from his chin and cheered.

Women, young and old, raised their voices, and high above the great chorus were the clear notes of the soloist, who sustained the high notes so long that the crowd broke into frequent applause. Miss Calvert was cheered to the echo when she departed.

EX-CONGRESSMAN HARRIS.

C. O'Connell Galvin of the AMERICAN'S editorial staff, made the opening address and introduced as the presiding officer Robert O. Harris, whom Mr. Galvin said had served with distinction on the Superior Court bench and in the halls of Congress. Mr. Galvin's allusions to the martyred Lincoln and McKinley in calling for troops in the Civil and Spanish Wars provoked loud cheers. He referred to the hallowed soil of the Common and said that President Wilson and our own illustrious Governor Walsh called for the men of Massachusetts to stand by the colors in this crisis as our forefathers did.

Former Congressman Harris said:

"Citizens of Boston:—It is unfortunate that the people of this great country, in which we have been trying to find honorable and peaceful solutions for gross social problems, should find itself suddenly at war with a neighbor.

"Threatening as the situation has been, we have hoped that war would be unnecessary, and that wise action would ensure the continuance of peace.

"War has come and when it comes to a country, it must be met as war, with all its horrors, its pains and its cost.

"Not with divided ranks, with carpings and criticisms, can a war successfully be carried on.

"When one is sick we are more concerned with the cause than causes. It is of no value to say, 'If he had done this,' or 'had not done that,' he would not have been sick. When he gets well we can say what we please, and regulate his conduct perhaps.

"As one who loves peace and hates war, I must look at each time as this put aside both my affection and my animosity and urge united action in our country's cause.

"We may well take to heart the first lesson of this war, an object lesson furnished by the neighbor with whom we are at war. Distracted and torn by factions, headed by unscrupulous and self-seeking men of ability and power, poor Mexico has been plunged into dreadful conflict, as a result of disunion and internal strife. God grant it may not be for long.

TIME FOR HIGH COURAGE.

"It is a time for men to keep their heads cool, their courage high and their ranks firm and unbroken. As at all times of this kind the citizens of Boston have met in mass meetings to consult, and to express their sentiments.

"As a modest citizen of this State, I declare myself for the UNITED STATES, and say that all things that make the internal dissension and division may be laid aside.

"There is one who believes in law and order, I would give notice to those who would take advantage of these times to defy law and bring about disorder that this American people will not long endure them.

"My Country, 'Tis of Thee' is now our song and inspiration. This conflict is not one of aggression. We are not covetous of a neighbor's lands. Let us not talk of killing him and taking his property.

"We want to walk in paths of peace. We want our distressed neighbor to be allowed to do the same.

"Let us keep the spoils of conquest and high aims for humanity, far apart in our minds, and unitedly push on to victory, with minds fixed on the cause of humanity, and not on sordid, blood-stained material profits.

REFERS TO PATRIOTS.

Mayor Curley, whose words stirred prolonged applause, said in part:

"I don't supose a gathering equal in size, intelligence and enthusiasm to this has assembled on Boston Common since the days when young men of another generation gallantly gave up their lives that the Union might be saved.

"We have assembled on a spot traditionally sacred throughout the world. Boston Common is enshrouded with a history proud and humane, and we have come here to show our love for the best flag known to history.

"We stand on a soil made sacred by sacrifice of patriots. Let the world know that the sole desire of the American people in this Mexican trouble is to help a down-trodden, afflicted race, and to lift them to a broader and more intelligent human plane.

"It is the patriotism of that great and lamented, that gigantic figure in American history, Abraham Lincoln (cheers), our revered Lincoln, who, in the coming generations will tower above even the mighty Napoleon.

"That is the spirit we are exemplifying. And Woodrow Wilson today is facing problems perplexing and of great moment.

"President Wilson has faced a sea of protest for pursuing his cautious, sound and humane policy. I feel sure that deep in the hearts of the President and the American people is a hope and determination that this step is not an attempt to make a choice between two murderers, but is an attempt to extend the blessing of this grand old nation to our afflicted neighbors south of us.

WILL PROTECT FLAG IN BOSTON.

"We are facing a grim reality at last. Our troops have invaded Mexico. Brigadier General Leonard A. Wood, a veteran who ought to know what he is talking about, is quoted as having said the United States would need 600,000 men and about fifteen years to settle this trouble.

"In times of peace the principle of free speech has never been interfered with on the Common or in this city, but if the I. W. W. or any other critics attempt to traduce our flag or our country as they have been doing elsewhere, I, as chief magistrate of this city, do not propose to countenance it. (Prolonged cheers.)

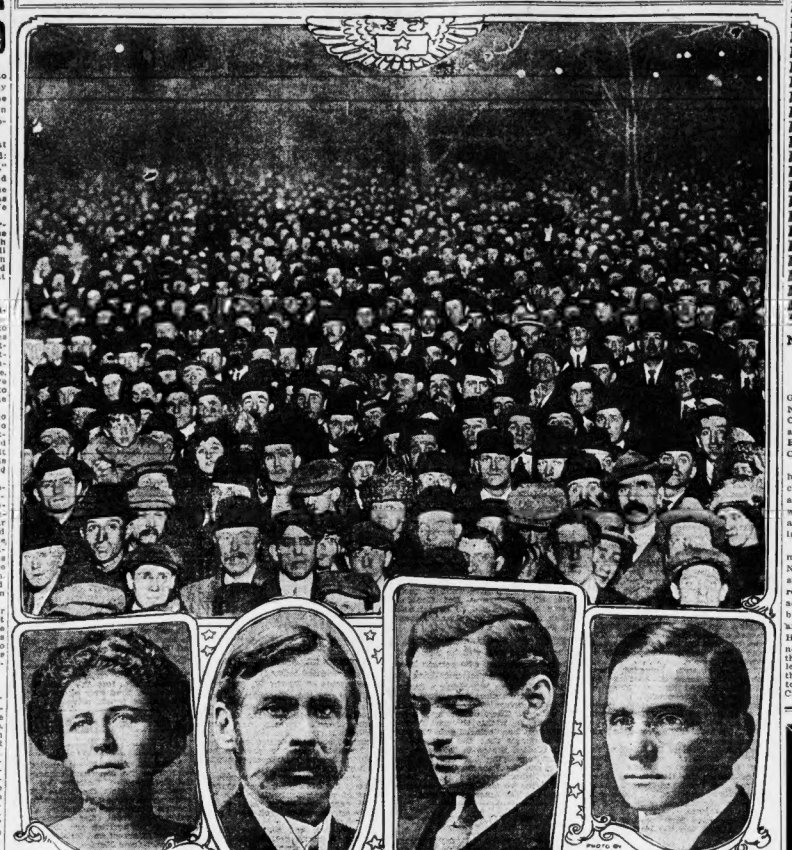
"If these individuals are discontented with our laws and our ways and, above all, with our flag, let them leave." (Cheers.)

Other speakers were Secretary of State Frank J. Donahue, Department Commander Sons of Veterans; Daniel J. Kane, Past Exalted Ruler of the Boston Lodge of Elks; John M. Woods, Department Commander of the Massachusetts G. A. R.—who remarked at the close of the exercises that he was seventy-five and ought to be in bed, but that he couldn't resist a chance to join in such a stirring patriotic demonstration; Judge Frank Leveroni of the Juvenile Court, and Mrs. Leveroni; Major Walter Scott Hale, Past Commander of the Spanish War Veterans; Patrick J. Haley, U. V. U.

CROWD JOIN SINGING.

Edward O. Skelton, past commander of the G. A. R., recited with dramatic fervor the poem "This Is Our Flag," written by Arthur Macy. The crowd went wild when the band played "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," "Rally Round the Flag," "Marching Through Georgia," the "Star Spangled Banner" and other patriotic melodies.

The exercises ended with a stirring salute to the flag participated in by the Irving Berlin Serenaders. A quartet of young male singers, with conch-horn megaphones, sang New York's latest hit, "This Is the Life," after which they converted the crowd in a singing class by flipping National anthems with a swing that was infectious.



Section of great crowd of 50,000 patriotic Bostonians. Below, from left to right, Mme. Calvert, who sang, and ex-Congressman Robert O. Harris, Mayor Curley and Secretary of State Donahue, who spoke.

THIS IS OUR FLAG

By ARTHUR MACY AND EDWARD O. SKELTON.
Recited by Mr. Skelton, a past commander of the Massachusetts G. A. R., at the great flag meeting on the Common.

This is our Flag,
Cheer it!
Who dares to drag or trail it?
Give it hurrahs!
Three for the stripes and three for the stars.

Uncover your head to it!
The sailors who sail to it,
The soldiers who march to it,
Cheer at the sight of it,
The unsullied life of it,
The red, white and blue of it.

This is our Flag,
Cheer it!
Valley and mountain shall hear it,
Fathers shall bless it, children caress it,
All shall maintain it,
No one dares stain it!

Cheers for the sailors who fought on the wave for it,
Cheers for the soldiers always so brave for it,

NEWTON PASTOR, WIFE AND SISTER REPORTED SAFE IN VERA CRUZ

A telegram received by the Rev. George H. Parkinson, pastor of the Newton Centre Methodist Episcopal Church, announces the safe arrival at Vera Cruz of the Rev. John W. Butler, his wife and his sister, Miss Clementina Butler.

The Rev. Mr. Butler, whose former home was in Newton Centre, is in charge of a mission work in Mexico, and was stationed in Mexico City, while his sister, who went to Mexico a few months ago, has been teaching in a mission school in Puebla.

Since trouble began in Mexico the many friends of the Butlers in the Newtons have felt anxiety for their safety, believing that they would remain at their posts of duty as long as possible. The Rev. Mr. Butler has been in Mexico twenty-seven years and is a personal friend of President Huerta. His sister also is prominent in mission work, and they are the children of the late "Mother" Butler, who died a few months ago at the age of ninety-six years. In Newton Centre the family home is on Crescent avenue.

I. C. S. Students Earn While They Learn

Only one person in 50 is able to secure a high-school training; only one in 200 has a college education.

Both of these classes require special training. Their previous education has been general in its character. They must do one thing better than some one else to earn a salary that is worth while.

To these and to the rest—to the boys and men who must work and learn—the International Correspondence Schools offer a practical, specialized training that universities, colleges and trade schools cannot give.

If you are in the ambitious class—if you want to be more useful to yourself, your world and your work—mark the coupon and let us tell you how you can learn to earn more in the kind of work that you prefer.

No matter how little you earn, and regardless of your present situation or previous lack of opportunity, the I. C. S. can help you.

HUERTA TO SEIZE AMERICANS AND HOLD THEM AS HOSTAGES

By A. H. JAMIESON.
Special correspondent of the International News Service with Atlantic fleet.

VERA CRUZ, April 25.—General Huerta plans to seize all the Americans remaining in Mexico City and hold them as hostages, according to the belief expressed today by refugees who have just arrived from the capital. This bold stroke, designed to prevent an attempt upon Mexico City, may have already been put into execution. Even if Huerta did not actually arrest Americans in the capital, he could hold them virtually prisoners by refusing to allow trains to leave the city.

Huerta Lacks Equipment.

Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American charge d'affaires, discussed at length the situation in Mexico City with Rear Admiral Fletcher and Rear Admiral Badger. Before going on board Admiral Badger's flagship, the Minnesota, Mr. O'Shaughnessy declared to a representative of the International News Service that Huerta is in no condition to offer strong resistance to the Americans.

"Every one knows that General Huerta is in no shape, financial or otherwise, to offer any strong resistance to the American forces," said Mr. O'Shaughnessy.

"If an American force should attempt to penetrate the interior, the greatest source of danger would come from detachments of Mexican irregulars carrying on guerrilla warfare.

Huerta on Edge of Revolt.

A question if there is any immediate likelihood of General Huerta's resignation. But public sentiment in this republic is fickle and his supporters may desert him at any time.

"Huerta's stand on the Tampico incident was a surprise to me. I looked to see him accede to the demands of the United States after a period of delay. I should say that he was badly advised. It is impossible to any just what Huerta will do now, but some of his close friends and advisers are openly hostile to Americans and they will undoubtedly counsel him to make war."

FAMINE MENACES REFUGEES.

The situation among the refugees and the Mexican non-combatants is getting more and more serious due to shortage of both food and clothing.

Quantities of provisions have been taken ashore from the United States ships to relieve the near famine conditions.

Vera Cruz again presents a picture of tropical tranquillity, the only difference from former times being the khaki clad troops who throng all the streets and the grim machine guns which crown roof tops or glitter in the sun in the plazas.

Commander Robert W. McNeely, of the Louisiana, who has been appointed chief of the naval police, is keeping strict order and Mexicans are getting a taste of American justice as dealt out by navy officers.

A batch of rugged Mexicans who had been arrested for various crimes, ranging from drunkenness to attempt to murder American marines, were arraigned in police court before Lieutenant Anton Foster who presided as judge. Mexican justice lags and it often requires many days to try an ordinary police court case, but Lieutenant Foster surprised the natives by disposing of ten cases in an hour, meting out severe sentences to all the guilty persons.

Many of the 1,376 refugees, who have been dumped into Vera Cruz within the past twenty-four hours, went aboard ships in the harbor through fear that Mexican Federals under General Gustave Maas would attack the city, but this fear is passing away now, for friendly Mexicans from the district occupied by the government forces northwest of this city report that there is no disposition among the Mexicans to attack the well-armed and well-drilled Americans.

BODIES ON FUNERAL PYRE.

General Maas has established headquarters at Soledad, where his troops are passing the time by raiding ranches.

During the night a lurid glow hung over the sandy plains south of the city where the bodies of some of the Mexican dead were burned. The Red Cross workers decided that it would be more sanitary to incinerate certain of the corpses which had lain since Tuesday in tropical heat beneath debris of the wrecked naval academy building. Accordingly the bodies were placed in air tight wooden boxes and placed upon the funeral pyre.

Rear Admiral Badger is considering the advisability of sending the fast scout cruiser Chester along the coast to pick up Americans who may have fled from the interior to the nearest port town.

The Nashville, which has been ordered to Puerto Mexico and then recalled because of threats of the Mexicans, arrived off the harbor today.

An English warship may be sent to Puerto Mexico, as there are extensive British interests in that vicinity. It is the eastern terminus of the Tehuantepec National Railway, which is owned by English capital.

American outposts have now been established five miles west of the city, while reconnoitring parties are sent daily several miles beyond the northwestern and southwestern suburbs to keep watch for straggling bands of Mexicans. That the Americans will not extend their operations any further than they have gone to the present, however, is evident. A high naval officer was quoted today as saying: "We have done what we set out to do. We have no orders to go any further."

WRECK WASHINGTON STATUE.

Members of the latest batch of Mexico City refugees say it is a wonder that no Americans were killed in the outbreak there which followed the announcement of the capture of Vera Cruz by Yankee sailors and marines.

Jorge Huerta, son of General Huerta, led the mob which tore down the statue of George Washington. Young Huerta climbed to the pedestal on which the statue rested and placed the rope about it by which it was hauled from its base. The rope was then attached to an automobile and the statue was dragged through the streets.

CABINET BADLY SPLIT OVER WAR POLICY, DECLARES ALFRED HENRY LEWIS

BRYAN SYMPATHY FOR REBELS HALTS ACTION

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—This evening a Senator who didn't care to see his name in print showed me a long telegram from an eminent American—name also suppressed—who wired him from Vera Cruz.

The E. A. has banking interests in Mexico City and hopes to return to them when again the skies are clear. The wire was important in this. It stated that 500 Americans were still in Mexico City; that there was much anti-American noise and hubbub of riot which might culminate in a massacre of the Americans; that Huerta, drunk and demonstrative, was encouraging the ruction while not letting the rioters get wholly from under his own dictatorial thumb, and that he, Huerta, was doing all he might to force an American advance upon his capital.

HUERTA FREE WITH INSULTS TO WILSON.

"In that way," said the E. A., "he plans to extricate himself from danger, be looked upon as a hero by his ignorant people, and get to some safe place where drink is plenty and he can spend to his satisfaction the money he has snatched."

The wire, continuing, declared that the E. A. stood within six feet of Huerta when Mr. O'Shaughnessy gave the Mexican dictator the substance of one of Mr. Wilson's protests.

"What in hell is your President pig talking about?" snorted Huerta in bad Spanish, more controlled by brandy than grammatical rules.

"He is crazy to think I will salute. Why doesn't he fight? For six weeks I've been trying to make him!"

The Huerta speech was so foul that the E. A. himself, in virtue his Senatorial friend, didn't set it down, but left the "blanks" to be supplied by an ear-experienced imagination.

This Vera Cruz message concluded by saying that when the E. A. left Mr. O'Shaughnessy in Mexico City that diplomatist was talking of starting for Vera Cruz, but intending to head, for his own safety, for some port on the Pacific side.

CABINET DISSENSION.

There are differences in the Cabinet. Mr. Bryan is inflamed against Secretary Garrison and Attorney-General McReynolds, both of whom are hurrying troops to Mexico City. Secretaries Daniels and Burleson are quietly behind Mr. Bryan and uphold his prairie-dog diplomacy without saying a deal about it. Mr. Daniels carries out the presidential orders, but has no suggestions to make.

In my several dispatches I have spoken of Mr. Bryan as too meek and of a heart too water logged aerially to face Mr. Wilson upon any proposition and carry opposition to the breaking point. One who is often at the White House and whose position in political society permits him to glance over the administration's shoulders, informs me that I'm wrong.

"Bryan may be irresolute," said the gentleman, "but he's running the administration none the less. Take yesterday. General Scott and Secretary Garrison prevailed upon Mr. Wilson to forbid any further sale of arms to Villa. Mr. Bryan flew into a passion and made him reverse the order.

"Later General Scott and Mr. Garrison, reinforced by several senators, prevailed upon Mr. Wilson again to order the sale of arms halted. This time Mr. Bryan couldn't move Mr. Wilson and is in a profound pet because of his failure. Make no mistake, however, in a general way Mr. Bryan is running the administration, and Mr. Wilson gives way to him on four propositions out of five."

"What's the influence?" I queried.

"I don't know, unless Mr. Wilson feels that he needs Mr. Bryan in his pro-English closed canal campaign to hold the radicals in Congress on the White House side."

BRYAN WOULD AID VILLA.

Mr. Bryan would give Villa all the arms that rubber-murderer asks for. Mr. Bryan would go no further than the present occupation of Vera Cruz. Also Mr. Bryan would abandon the latter port as soon as "honor is satisfied," whatever that may mean.

The closest people to Mr. Wilson confess the Bryan "PULL" without being able to explain it. Some have said that the White House carried Mr. Bryan along as a soap-gourd upon which might be unloaded the administration's sins. Others do not accept this.

They cannot believe that the administration would make a day-to-day record which loses like a corkscrew or give way to policies which remind one of nothing so much as the antics of a tumbler pigeon, or of a dog chasing its tail, and expect a world to blame but the administration but Mr. Bryan. The only thing is that strange things are going forward behind the administrational scenes concerning which and the causes thereof no one as yet has made an accurate guess.

In this connection it is to be remarked that Mr. Bryan is developing an insolence of manner and opinion never before noticed in his case. Men go before him to speak of large interests being wrecked in Mexico and of millions stolen or destroyed. Mr. Bryan waves them impatiently aside. "Why did you go there? Why don't you get out? Do you think this country will kill people by the thousands to serve your sordid interest?"

RECALL HIS OWN BOOK.

These are specimens of the milder Bryan manner. One caller, replying to Mr. Bryan's question of "Why did you go there" unloaded upon that forgetful Cabineteer his own book, "Under Two Flags," printed in 1906.

In this tome of doubtful value Mr. Bryan counselled investors and would-be moneymakers to trek to Mexico at once. To be thus confronted with his own words put the Bryan back still higher up, and the caller left him spitting like some incensed Cabinet cat. "Oh, that mine enemy would write a book!" Get this volume, if you would learn how far apart are Bryan, the secretary, and Bryan, the Chautauquan.

Speaking of Mr. Bryan, not the least of his worries grow out of complaints against his good friend Villa. Unable to resist his inborn bent to pick and steal, that enterprising felon has just grabbed 20,000 bales of cotton and has them in present larcenous possession. Also he is offering them for sale in El Paso at $50 a bale.

Villa declares that the cotton he has thus "confiscated" is Spanish cotton, without clearly pointing out to anyone's satisfaction but Mr. Bryan's what right he has to "confiscate" the cotton of a Spaniard. There are certain French gentlemen here, however, who insist hysterically that two-thirds of the stolen cotton was never the chattels of any Spaniard or Spaniards, but in their very own.

Mr. Bryan has asked them for proofs, but since the astute Villa most carefully removed the ownership marks when he "confiscated" the 20,000 bales the poor, robbed Frenchmen are helpless. Beholding which Mr. Bryan passes his State Departmental hands palm upward, as who should say: "What can I do when you have no proofs?" while Villa, as beheld by the eye of imagination, grins in Juarez, far away.

VILLA'S PURPOSE IN JUAREZ.

By the way, those yesterday assurances of friendship for the United States, in which Villa so effusively unbelted, are not believed. The Western wise ones insist that his design when he started north was to attack El Paso, stand that devoted city on its head and empty its deserted pockets. His liver turned to water, and he shifted his plan.

Villa explains that he journeyed north to Juarez merely to see his wife.

The Western wise ones suggest that other gentlemen have journeyed north to see their wives, but they never brought with them a cavalry brigade and half a dozen batteries of field guns. Then again to Villa, meant murder and robbery, but weakened. Perhaps those stolen 20,000 bales of French cotton got somewhat in his way.

P. S. Mr. Roosevelt has wired his long-horned friends, George Curry, Ben Daniels, Bob Ledbook and Billy Tilghman, to be ready to call together for his warlike use and behoof not a regiment, but a full brigade of rough riders.

When Mr. Roosevelt sailed away to the platform conquest of Buenos Ayres and the Argentine, a friend warned him in these words. "You are making a mistake, Colonel. About the time you're crossing the equator Mr. Wilson will be crossing the Rio Grande."

"Not a chance," returned the Colonel, with a confident shake of the head; "not a living chance. No textbook President goes to war."

WILSON DECLARES HE WANTS NO EMERGENCY WAR FUND "AS YET"

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Representative Fitzgerald, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, asked the President if he wanted "any war appropriation." Mr. Wilson said "not as yet."

The President has hesitated to approve any request for an emergency appropriation by the War Department for fear it might be interpreted as a forerunner of war.

Secretary Garrison is virtually without funds for the present movements of the Army, but he is drawing on the future. It is a violation of law for the War Department to incur any obligation without authorization by Congress, but Mr. Garrison simplify said he had "faced hell several times in the last few days on this account." Leaders in Congress have assured him they would back him up in the present emergency.

Bluejackets Feed Mexican Refugees

VERA CRUZ, April 25.—Many Mexican refugees here who desired to go into the interior were provided with a train. American bluejackets fed the refugees at the depot before the train departed.

Here are some of Uncle Sam's boys who are defending the border and anxiously awaiting the order to advance into Mexico. In the centre is Captain C. D. Scott. Back of him is Lieutenant W. Finch. They are testing a field gun at Fort Bliss, Tex.

MOVE TO THROW BIG U. S. ARMY ON BORDER

By JOHN J. DALEY.
Staff Correspondent of the I. N. S. at the War Department.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Plans to concentrate a great army on the border were made at a secret conference early today of the advisory board of the army. The sending of the troops, however, will depend on the developments of the next forty-eight hours, it was learned following the conference.

Shortly after midnight Secretary of War Garrison called in Assistant Secretary Breckenridge and General Leonard Wood. After reading reports from the navy department it was decided that a conference should be held and the following officers were summoned:

General Aleshire, quartermaster-general in charge of transportation and subsistence; General Crozier, chief of the Bureau of Ordnance; General Hugh Scott, assistant chief of staff, and Colonels Allen and Hodges, and Captain McCoy of General Wood's personal staff.

PLAN FOR AERO FLEET.

At the close of the conference no word was given out, but it was learned that tentative orders were prepared to be issued as soon as advices were received from the front. Assistant Secretary Breckenridge returned to his office and kept an all night vigil for telegrams. No alarming news reached him, however.

An early morning dispatch from Admiral Badger quoting Admiral Mayo as reporting that the rebels were storming Tampico caused a stir in the Navy Department. The report stated that two Mexican gunboats, the Bravo and Vera Cruz, were shelling the city.

No mention was made in the dispatch of any part being taken in the fight by the American ships at Tampico. The phase of the situation presented a problem to the American naval officers at Washington. Whether the United States would take a hand in the fighting was a question to be decided by President Wilson, high officials stated.

Secretary Daniels called into conference during the night A. B. Lambert, head of the aero reserve corps of the United States, to formulate plans for the invasion of Mexico by an aeroplane fleet.

Mr. Lambert pledged to the secretary the services of one hundred expert aviators, each of whom owns his own machine. These men will be ordered to the front today. They and their machines will be taken on transports to Vera Cruz and placed at the disposal of Admiral Badger for reconnoitering purposes.

THREE ARMIES TO MOVE.

The War Department is ready to throw three armies in the field and follow as many lines of attack should a general movement against Mexicans as a whole become necessary.

The first plan is the attack initiated with the sailing of the Fifth Brigade for Vera Cruz under General Funston. This force will move on Mexico City from the east coast town.

The second will be the army that moves upon Tampico. It is said that there are more than 5,000 armed Mexicans in that vicinity.

The army to which will fall the most difficult operations of all three will be that which will, in the event of coalition of the Mexican parties, combat the forces of Carranza and Villa in Northern Mexico. El Paso, Texas, is regarded as a likely point for its concentration and Juarez the first and natural point of attack.

At the War Department it is felt that the northern border of Mexico now is the danger point. The officers along the borders have been cautioned to exercise great tact in dealing with the situation.

It is understood that the present policy is to seize one by one the important gulf ports and to blockade Mexico, but it will take many times that number of troops to guard the railways and to furnish convoys for supplies on the roads and garrisons for basis of supplies. The volunteers will be called for this work probably when the general forward movement begins.

WHITE SQUADRON FLAGSHIP CHICAGO NOW IN COMMISSION

The famous old cruiser Chicago, flagship of the "White Squadron," was placed in commission following a railogram order from Washington today. She was towed from her berth at the North End pier and took aboard 140 naval prisoners from the Charlestown yard. The prison was then closed, the first time in a decade.

Out of the sixty marines at the local naval prison to guard the inmates, twenty-five of them were taken aboard the Chicago, under command of Lieutenant D. F. Smith, as a guard for the prisoners. As soon as they have been landed at the Portsmouth Naval Prison, the Chicago will return to the local yard for examination. The Chicago has been used by the Massachusetts Naval Reserves as their training ship.

The rest of the prison guard, with an additional seven men and two corporals from the barracks, under command of Captain W. H. Parker, were ordered to depart for New York at 4 o'clock this afternoon. There they will embark for Mexico.

WHOLE POPULATION ON FRONTIER GIVEN GUNS AND POWDER

EL PASO, Tex., April 25.—Every one on the frontier is being armed and the supply of guns and ammunition in many of the towns is already exhausted.

Reports from Ysleta, Tex., fifteen miles east on the Rio Grande, are that Mexicans are stealing everything loose and portable and are threatening despite the efforts of a squad of United States soldiers to control them.

At Las Cruces, N. M., also near the border, a company of National Guardsmen is patrolling the town to guard against outbreaks.

TAMPICO NOW UNDER FIRE BY REBEL ARMY

VERA CRUZ, April 25.—A wireless dispatch from Tampico announces that the rebels are attacking that city. General Zaragosa, the Federal commander, is resisting the Constitutionalists with 6,000 men. The Mexican gunboats in the harbor are shelling that section of the town against which the main attack is directed, and badly aimed shells are exploding in all parts of the city, wrecking buildings and killing many persons.

Hundreds of foreigners, mostly Americans, are in peril. The battleship Louisiana, which had left here to meet the United States transport carrying General Funston's brigade to Vera Cruz, has been intercepted by wireless and ordered to divert her course to Tampico to assist Rear Admiral Mayo

ALL MEXICO UNITED BY WAR TO FIGHT AGAINST UNITED STATES

The following cable dispatch to the AMERICAN is from Luigi Braini, an Italian regular correspondent of the London Telegraph in Mexico City. It represents the news as made public by the Mexican government, which aims obviously to deceive its public as to the real conditions:

MEXICO CITY, April 25.—The miracle is complete. The Mexican revolution has ceased. The nation is blended into a unity which seems to be formidable.

I spoke with some of the rebel chiefs who had come to take orders from the Huerta government. They clearly showed me they were kindled by furious patriotic enthusiasm.

Three years of atrocious fratricidal war was forgotten in a day. The Indian band of Emiliano Zapata is already concentrating in the State of Puebla. Revolutionaires of Guererro and Ualisco are under the orders of the Minister of War.

The Japanese are making the most pronounced expressions of friendliness for Mexico in her crisis.

A telegram from Gonsales announces that the rebel leader, Villa, has joined General Velasco at the head of 50,000 men, who are marching on the frontier.

Official confirmation of the latter fact is wanting, because communication with Torreon is still interrupted. But the latest despatches from Bustillo indicate the reality of the agreement.

The Carranistas, who are fighting in the State of Tamaulipas, are defending Tampico; revolutionaries of Matamoras have crossed the frontier under command of Lucio Blanco and occupied Brownsville on the Rio Grande. Nogales is attacked by ex-revolutionaries of Sonora.

Counting upon the paralysis of the revolution, the Americans had denuded their frontier in order to concentrate their blow on Vera Cruz, leaving only 4,000 men to face any attack from the frontier towns which remained in the hands of the Federals.

They did not anticipate the sudden unification of the Mexican people, who have so unexpectedly rediscovered a feeling of nationality under the sudden blow.

However, instead of failing to pieces, Mexico has become welded like a glowing iron under the hammer and confronts the enemy like a compact mass

Today all the divisions of race and class have vanished and in face of common danger Mexican society is reawakened with its old discipline and behind the supreme government.

The Indian multitudes, who seemed to be brutal, ignorant and whom the revolution was driving into wild anarchy, are now offering themselves as volunteers in orderly array.

They are coming out of their quarters of the town singing the national hymn and crying "Long live our Mother Mexico. She is indeed a Madre Dolorosa."

The demonstrations do not cease for an instant, but are becoming more solemn, less aggressive. Internal peace has given the country new confidence in its own resources.

Immense crowds with bare heads pass along singing with the fervor of prayer at windows. Ladies and their maids wave flags and cheer.

Employes at ministries have formed fighting groups for the protection of the town in case all troops are obliged to leave it. They are issuing patriotic proclamations.

Columns of volunteers marching in fours pass along the streets on the way to barracks to which hitherto recruits have been led by force and which were the terror of the people.

Amidst a frenzy of applause, 2,000 scholars marched past in uniform. Above every collection of people arises the form of an orator.

Ministers are obliged to come out on the balconies of the ministries and harangue the people who summon them.

One hears reference to Huerta in words of love, of passion, of adoration. His name prevails above enthusiasm for "The Heart of Bronze," as he is called, while the word Wilson causes an immense howl of "death to the blonde beasts," meaning the Americans.

Factories, industrial establishments and commercial houses have given men leave to enroll themselves in the army, guaranteeing maintenance to their families.

CUP YACHT RESOLUTE LAUNCHING TONIGHT TO HIDE SECRET

AFTER RITCHIE FOR BIG JULY GO ON COAST

By JACK CONWAY.

WILLIE RITCHIE, who recently eliminated Tommy Murphy from among the candidates for the lightweight championship, will probably engage in his next twenty-round ring tussle on July 4. Promoter Tom McCarey of Los Angeles has made the title holder a flattering offer to meet the winner of the Freddy Welsh-Leach Cross tussle, which takes place on the Coast next Tuesday, and he will probably accept McCarey's terms.

The Fourth of July is a great day for boxing in California and a contest between Ritchie and the logical contender for the championship would draw a tremendous crowd.

The gate receipts for the fight between Ritchie and Murphy were $17,617. This was the largest sum which was taken in at a boxing match in California since Nelson and Britt fought there nine years ago. Ritchie received $15,200, while Murphy pulled down $7,350.

McCarey believes that a whirl between Ritchie and either Welsh or Cross would draw as much money as Ritchie and Murphy did. Just now it looks as though Welsh would outpoint Leach and a bout between Ritchie and Welsh would have an interesting flavor about it and such encounters usually arouse an intense amount of interest.

Welsh is the lightweight champion of England and has been clamoring for a bout with Ritchie ever since the latter defeated Wolgast. He has even gone so far as to declare that he is the real lightweight champion as a result of the decision he gained over Ritchie when the Frisco boy was climbing the ladder of fame.

GEORGE ENGEL, who was a big favorite in Frank Klaus ring successes, steps to the front of the pugilistic stage and announces that if Frank Moran is on his feet at the end of his twenty-round bout with Jack Johnson he will be declared a winner by the honorable referee. Engel has spent a great deal of his time in France and is in a position to know the style of fighting the French people toward Johnson. He says that they do not waste any love on the Galveston man, and that if they get a chance they will relieve him of the heavyweight championship. Here is what Engel had to say in discussing the coming bout:

"Frank is just waiting for the chance to hammer Johnson. The negro has pulled several things over on the Frenchmen, and they are just waiting for an opportunity to even scores in his own coin. Take it from me, if Moran is standing when the twenty-fifth round is over he'll be given the decision."

JOHNSON has not been taking good care of himself. He has given himself over to the comfortable characteristic style of living for which Paris is known. When he was here he looked sprightly and upright, and had that popper that made him a marvel of a man. Now his shoulders sag, he droops and his frame is bent. He looks as though he were all in. He takes a meal at which he doesn't drink a quart of wine.

"He cannot attempt to keep in condition. He has caused the French people to become disgusted with him."

WHEN Johnson went to Paris he was under the management of Leon See, for a vaudeville career. One of the terms of outdoor places of amusement in Paris is Luna Park. Johnson was given a chance to show there. He received $100 to $200 a night. This money did not satisfy the champion. He demanded $2,000 a week. See had used him in splendid fashion and would not pay him the money.

"The result of the affair was that Johnson lost much of his prestige. See practically runs the boxing game in France, and his countrymen support him nobly. If for no other reason than to avenge See they will be ready to hand Johnson an adverse decision if Moran is on his feet."

Boxing Results.

Joe Engan of the South End won the decision on two rounds in his bout with K. O. Pulis of Connecticut at the Neptune A. C. Pulis substituted for Kid Alberts. In the preliminaries, Young Clancy won from Young Bailey in three rounds and Young Arsenau and Young Sousa boxed six rounds to a draw.

* * *

At New York, Jim Coffey, the Dudlin giant, knocked out Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, in the fourth round of a ten-round match here.

* * *

At Rockland, Me., Johnny Dugan, steamboat champion, at the Colonial A. C., quit after one punch by James E. Roan of Boston. The bout lasted less than thirty seconds. Harold Rogers knocked out Samuel Levy in the fourth round at Lynn. Wheeler knocked out Benjamin Briggs in the second round of their match. Two draws were fought by Austin Brewer and James Sullivan and Albert Hasbrook and Bigelow Healey. Frank J. McDonald sustained a dislocated shoulder in a wrestling match with Leon Conary.

At Philadelphia, Preston Brown lost to Tommy Langdon at the Kensington A. C.

At New York, Marty Allen of East New York outpointed Eddie Wallace of Brooklyn in a fast ten-round bout at the East New York A. C.

TY COBB TELLS HOW HAZERS WERE FOOLED

Written for the Boston AMERICAN
By TY COBB.

Whatever the style of hazing decided upon, it is quite natural for the baseball hazers to expect that the recruit will come off "second best." But a couple of seasons ago a big recruit pitcher turned the tables on a party of would-be hazers while his club was in the South.

The first year this fellow joined the club they worked the "badger fight" on him, and worked it so well that some of the players didn't stop laughing for a month. He stuck all season and pitched good ball, but he didn't learn much about the ways of the world, and reported in the following Spring just as gangling and gawky as ever, the very picture of a comic supplement "rube."

Well, the boys got together and decided that it would be a shame not to have some more fun with anything so verdant, so they planned a "snipe hunt."

This is one of the oldest pranks in the world, I reckon. The victim is told that a certain place, invariably a long way from anywhere, and, if possible, cold and swampy, is much infested with snipes.

Then the method of taking these birds is explained, namely, that one hand holds a bag with a lantern in the mouth of it, while the rest beat the swamp to wake up the snipe and scare them in toward the light. They are supposed to become bewildered by the rays of the lantern and to walk right into the bag, which the holder immediately closes, imprisoning large numbers of them.

The "sucker" is given the honor of holding the bag, and, of course, as soon as he takes his stand in the swamp, the others hike off home and roll on the ground in glee.

Fixing Things Up for the Victim.

This lanky pitcher's eyes fairly stuck out when he heard about the "snipe hunt" and the boys were getting up. He drank in the details like a thirsty man at a well and asked all sorts of idiotic questions. It seemed almost too good to be true that there should be such a made-to-order victim in the training camp.

After a long discussion as to who should hold the bag, somebody proposed Jones, which left the pitcher's name, but which will answer just as well.

"That guy hasn't sense enough. It takes a wise fellow to do this job," protested one of the plotters.

"Jones is dumb and anybody who says he hasn't brains enough to hold that sack is likely to get into a row," broke in another, hotly.

"Well, what I said still goes, and it goes for you, too, if you want to take it up," yelled the first speaker, assuming a threatening attitude.

"I'll punch you in the nose," came back No. 2, and in a minute they had their coats off and were rolling around on the floor. Of course, this was all part of the frame-up to impress the "sucker," and the other players stepped in and stopped the "fight."

Well, they finally settled it that Jones was good enough to have the place of honor with the bag and lantern, and on a rainty, chilly night about half a dozen of the squad set out for the swamp where snipes were supposed to abound.

But the Victim Beat Them to It.

Jones took his station according to the rehearsal and the others started off, promising to beat up enough snipe to fill the bag twice full. The minute they got out of sight of land they started back for the automobile which had brought them from the hotel, some five miles away. As they went they held their sides with laughter, thinking of "poor old rube" standing there in the rain waiting for snipe that wouldn't appear.

No automobile was in sight when they got back to the rendezvous, nor could they find a trace of it anywhere, though they whooped and yelled until their throats were sore. So the whole party, which by this time had ceased to laugh at Jones' stupidity, trudged that long five miles back to the hotel through mud and rain.

They found a merry party awaiting them in the lobby. Jones, with a large cigar stuck in his mouth at a rakish angle, was the centre of a group that seemed to be very much amused over something.

"Well, you didn't seem to have much luck with the snipe this evening," said Jones, when the bedraggled band had appeared. "I had an idea myself that it wasn't going to be a good night for them, so I sprinted back to the machine and threatened the darky driver with a gun until he cranked up and drove me home. Hope you enjoyed your walk.

"You see, I copyrighted that snipe-hunting stunt several years ago and have been improving on it ever since. Have a cigar? I bought a box as I came in and told the clerk that you fellows would pay him for it in the morning after you finished laughing at the best joke of the season. I also told the hotel tailor that there probably would be a lot of cleaning and pressing jobs for him in the near future."

Too Early to Get Much Valuable "Dope."

Well, they're off in the American and National Leagues and the dope sheet crowds seem to indicate that the Federals haven't taken all the "fans."

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. Mitchell

YOU gotta be on your toes in this game of baseball. You must keep your eye peeled and take advantage of every opening; otherwise your team setdom gets in the first division. It is taking advantage of the percentages that count in winning games.

* * *

DOUBTLESS Stallings is handing out this sort of stuff to his ball players when they come together in meeting. But it is doubtful if he says it in this gentle way. There is considerable fireworks in his vocabulary when occasion arises.

* * *

IF may be taken for granted that he gave Big Schmidt a good call for a piece of his weakness on the butcher's part in the sixth inning. The score was 3 to nothing in Brooklyn's favor. Schmidt was on third, and Deal was on second, and there was one out. Gowdy drove a screeching liner to left-centre and over Wheat's head. As this ball passed him, Wheat jumped in the air, stuck up his gloved hand and stopped the flight of the ball. He did not catch it, but juggled it, and it looked as though the ball would drop safe to the ground. But Wheat recovered it before it dropped, completing a wonderful catch.

* * *

SCHMIDT could have walked home after the catch. Because Wheat, who was running toward the bleachers in right field had no chance to turn and shoot the ball to the plate in time to catch even a slow runner. But Schmidt didn't wait to see whether the ball was caught or muffed, but jogged home. The result was Wheat pegged the ball to Cutshaw, who tossed it to Smith for a double play, retiring the side funless.

* * *

EVEN so, Schmidt would have been only one run, and the Braves were five runs behind, you say?

True, but you never can tell about these ball games. There is always a chance before the other side puts three men out. If Schmidt had played the thing right, it might have been the whole complexion of the game.

* * *

THE big fellow has not been himself since the season opened. His fielding has not been up to his good standard. He is not covering the ground and seems uncertain in his movements around first base. Furthermore, he isn't hitting up to the mark. Doubtless he is over anxious, as most players are when they get in a slump. When Big Schmidt strikes his stride, carpenters will be needed to repair some broken fences up at the old South End Grounds. In the meantime we must adopt a policy of watchful waiting.

* * *

THERE are others on the team who are not playing the game they ought to play. It is foolish to be so critical thus early in the season, however. Give 'em a chance. They'll come around all right before long—it is hoped.

* * *

THERE is certainly nothing the matter with Leslie Mann's right arm. Some of his throws recently have been remarkable. One he made yesterday was as good or better than has been seen for a very long time. It is impossible to describe the play properly, as it is one of those kind you have to see to appreciate. At any rate, Mann caught a stiff liner away out in deep right-centre, and by a beautiful throw doubled a runner at third.

On Sunday he made another remarkable throw from centre field to first base, and would have doubled a runner then, except that the ball came to Schmidt on a short bound, and the big fellow didn't hold it.

WOLGAST MATCH INSPIRES RITCHIE

By WILLIE RITCHIE—No. 13.

That four-round bout with Champion Wolgast convinced me of one thing, my ability to lick him. I did not claim then that I could beat any lightweight in the world, but I made up my mind that I had Wolgast's number.

"You're a pretty lucky kid that I did not knock you out," said Ad after the battle. "I was just testing myself, and I came near flattening you."

"Say, I've got your number," I replied, "any time you want to take another chance, just say the word. I know I can beat you."

"That's the funniest thing I ever heard," said Wolgast. "You better go back to the four-rounders where you figure."

But I did not go back to the four-rounders. I just went around making speeches about Wolgast. I called on Promoter Jim Coffroth and asked him for a twenty-round match with the champion. Coffroth treated me nicely and listened to what I had to say, but told me I was not quite big enough yet to stand up against the champion.

Some of my friends laughed when I told them that I intended to keep on Wolgast's trail, and others agreed with me. This little bit of encouragement which I received helped me a whole lot.

Ritchie Follows Ad Wolgast to Chicago.

Three days after the battle Wolgast departed for Chicago. When I heard of his leaving I came to the conclusion that I might just as well trail right after him, so I boarded the train the next morning and landed in Chicago right on his heels.

Before I left San Francisco I did a little press agent work. I gathered up a bunch of clippings from the San Francisco papers and also mailed a few photographs showing Wolgast in distress in several of the rounds. There was great action to them, as every one knows the camera never lies.

After I had peddled my stuff around Chicago, they were willing to admit that I must have been something to the San Francisco reports. They gave me quite a send-off and said that I was at least entitled to a match with one of the lightweight contenders, even if Wolgast did pass up.

Wolgast jumped to New York and I jumped right after him. Promoter Billy Gibson, who always has been a good friend of mine, saw a chance to make a big card by putting Wolgast and myself on in Madison Square Garden for a ten-round mixup. I accepted right off the reel and agreed to fight for little more than training expenses.

But Wolgast would not listen. He flatly refused an offer of $7,000 to meet me.

It was shortly after this that Tom McCarey made Wolgast an offer to fight Joe Rivers at Los Angeles, July 4. There was a chance for him to make more money, and so nobody could blame him at that.

Leach Cross Turns Down Willie Ritchie.

Then I began to hustle for a crack at somebody else. Leach Cross was the big noise around New York, and I approached him personally and asked to be given a chance. The best I got was a laugh from Leach and all of his friends.

"Can't afford to fight anybody without a reputation," said Cross. "You go out and see what you can do against some of those second and third-raters. If you hold good come back, perhaps I will talk to you."

That was the way Cross talked to me then, but it is different now. He was lucky to go on with me in New York last month, and he has been after me ever since. But I beat him once, and I guess that it is up to him now to fight himself back to form if he wants to talk business with me.

For five weeks I hung around New York looking for a match with some fighter worth while. But it seemed the fates were against me, the Summer was well on, and most of the boxing clubs had closed for the season. I felt down-hearted and discouraged, for there was nothing in sight for me.

Finally an offer came from New Orleans. This was a life-saver. It meant a chance for me to fight Joe Mandot, who was then in his prime, the real lightweight champion of the South. It looked to be too good for truth, but when my ticket arrived I just hopped on the boat and set sail for the South.

Hoppe Has a Close Call with Yamada

NEW YORK, April 25.—Koj Yamada, who once defeated Champion Willie Hoppe here by a single point at 18.2 balkline billiards, gave the young New Yorker another hard battle in the 14.1 world's championship tournament last night, and was beaten 400 to 393.

Ora Morningstar of Pittsburgh outplayed Jacob Schaefer of Chicago, 400 to 76.

George Sutton of Chicago beat George F. Slosson, 400 to 282, and Calvin Demarest of Chicago defeated Harry P. Cline of Philadelphia, 400 to 217, in the matinee matches.

PREDICTION.

I know not if the Connie Macks will finish at the top.
I know not if the Sox will rise nor if the Naps will flop,
But this is my prediction in the coming pennant race:
The team that beats the Browns will have a cinch on seventh place.

The abolition of the intentional pass might be a good thing for baseball, but if the unintentional pass were cut out, Ed Reulbach would have to sell motor cars for a living.

It is said that Willie Hoppe makes $25,000 a year manipulating the ivories, but many a baseball magnate makes more than that at the same game.

Yagotta hand it to the English sporting experts for their keen powers of observation. They have discovered that baseball is a faster game than cricket.

The proposal to force the Cardinals out of major league baseball shows that some persons put themselves to a lot of unnecessary trouble.

Luke Collins (whoever he is) announces through the public prints that he will stick to the Winona, Minn., team and leave the Federal League flat on its vertebrae.

In recognition of their four months' work on the yacht, the draughtsman, the metal workers, riveters and riggers were given a banquet by Robert W. Emmons, 2d, of Boston, the manager of the Resolute, representing the owners.

GUARD SECRET OF CUP YACHT AT LAUNCHING

BRISTOL, R. I., April 25.—The cup defender Resolute will be launched at sunset today and it is anticipated that she will be speedily rigged and will go into commission for her first trial within the next ten days, or about the same time that the other two defenders are ready for launching.

The Resolute has been built for Vice-Commodore George F. Baker, Jr., Rear Commodore J. P. Morgan, former Commodores F. G. Bourne, Cornelius Vanderbilt and A. C. James and former Vice-Commodore Henry Walters.

Secretary George A. Cormack of the New York Yacht Club is secretary and will sail on the yacht with Mr. Emmons. Another amateur, Charles Francis Adams 2d, treasurer of Harvard College, and one of the most experienced helmsmen on the coast, will handle the boat.

The Resolute was laid down on December 12, but work was stopped on the 20th on account it was said, of a change in the plans. It was resumed six days later and has progressed steadily since then.

As in the case of the other cup defence yachts constructed at the Herreshoff works, a great deal of secrecy regarding the craft has prevailed.

The yacht therefore will be launched as were the Columbia, Constitution and Reliance, in the fading twilight. As an additional precaution against her lines being seen, the Resolute will slide down the greased ways instead of being lowered into the water in a cradle.

After failing to meet for several days, the Federal League has recovered from its stupor and is meeting in its old-time form.

THREE STRAIGHT FROM SENATORS CRY OF RED SOX

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 25.—The two victories of the Red Sox in this city has about placed Manager Carrigan and his crew on edge and from the way they performed yesterday the Boston fans need not be surprised if the club strikes a winning streak that will be hard to break.

Beating Walter Johnson undoubtedly woke the Carrigan boys up and they certainly played the game for all it was worth yesterday, when they outpointed the locals, although the Griffinites outhit them almost two to one.

At the hotel today, Manager Carrigan said that his team needed the victory over Johnson to give it confidence and he is figuring on clear sailing from this out.

SHAKEUP IN SENATORS.

Manager Griffith will work Boehling this afternoon in the hope of breaking the local's losing streak, while Manager Carrigan will probably show us another one of his kid twirlers.

The Red Sox leader is nothing if not shrewd, and his experience tells him that a youngster has a better chance of trimming the Washington boys than a veteran.

Manager Griffith contemplates a change in the Nationals' outfield. The fact that Dan Moeller is not getting into his batting stride has proved a great handicap to the team and Griffith is anxious to have some one in right field who will do some hitting.

He is not yet satisfied, however, that Moeller will not get to going in due time, hence has decided to keep him in the lineup for some time to come in the hope that he will get into his stride.

SENATORS OUT FOR JOHNSON

If he improves he will continue to play, but in the meantime Griffith is preparing both Acosta and Paul Smith with a view of having one or the other ready in the event that he finds it necessary to give Moeller a rest.

Either of these young outfielders stands a chance to make good. Smith is one of the fastest men on the team and shows ability at the bat. As for Acosta, it is only a question of time when he will be a great ball player.

Griffith predicts that the next time the team plays Rankin Johnson, he will be given a warm reception. The youngster will be solved by them, he argues.

It is the fact that Johnson has a good, fast ball and a lamentably slow curve, which made him effective. Now that the players have been up against him he figures that they will know how to protect themselves when facing his delivery.

DODGER STARS OUT, TIME FOR BRAVES TO WIN

It is on the cards that the Braves line up against the Brooklyns for the third game of the series this afternoon. Game called at 3 o'clock. There was some doubt about the time of yesterday's battle. They sprang it at 3 o'clock and the "fans" were still coming after an inning or two had been played. But 3 o'clock is the hour today.

It is to be hoped—and it may confidently be expected—that the Boston men will put a little more life and dash in their play this P. M. The series stands horse and horse.

If the Braves are to beat the Brooklyns now is the time to do it. Reulbach, one of the Dodgers' best pitchers, has been ill of bronchitis and cannot be expected to pitch this afternoon. The great Nap Rucker is recovering from tonsilitis and though he may be able to work on Monday, he can hardly pitch today.

With these two clever boxmen out of it temporarily, now is the time for Stallings' men to get busy and take some scalps.

But to win from the visitors requires better pitching than was shown by the artists who performed yesterday. Rob Perdue was hit hard and often and only lasted four rounds. Corsehan finished out and handed seven passes to the other fellows. The Dodgers got an early jump on Stallings' men and piled up the runs at frequent intervals so that they had sight of them when the long-drawn-out game ended.

Young Dick Crutcher, who showed to well in one of the Philadelphia games, may be asked to undertake the box duty today. Gowdy will catch And if Robinson puts in another belt-handed pitcher, no doubt Jim Murray will cover Left Field for the Braves. He got his first chance yesterday and fielded well and hit the ball hard also.

Eleven members of the Boston team went to Fitchburg this morning to stock up against Fred Lake's New England League team.

BRITONS FEAR RELAY TEAMS OF PENN-CORNELL

By N. S. JACKSON.

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—The members of the Oxford relay team will go into its four-mile race today for international honors with the best assurance that even if they lose they will know that they have run the best race of their career.

We are satisfied with our condition, and our final workout convinces me that our team is fit for the race of their lives. We do not underestimate the strength of our opponents, for the best runners of this big country will be pitted against us, but we feel that we will be able to do as well as we have ever done before, and as I have said before, the issue is now the less a hero if he runs a good race and fails.

Thus far I have made no predictions as to the outcome of this event. I have said that we expect a close race, and we do. It would be too bold to say that we expect to win, but we are all in condition to run a splendid race.

I am in no position to give out the order of our relay. I believe, however, that Taber will start the race. This is because he is not partial to the baton system and his speed will give us a chance to get rid of this obstacle early in the contest and still hold our reserve forces for the end.

Taber will undoubtedly get the advantage of the first relay and we should start the second mile with a fair lead. Sproule will probably be the next man to take up the pace and Gaussen will follow. This order may be changed, but it seems to be the schedule. I will then run the final relay.

The magnitude of the Pennsylvania relay games is surprising to the Oxford team. Franklin Field was fairly alive with the numberless contestants, who had their final practice. That we will be forced to compete with the best this country can produce is evident, and from what I have seen of the athletes on the track we will have some hard work to do.

Judging from information I have received here there is more interest in this set of games than in any other which has been held in Philadelphia in many years. Some are so kind as to tell me that the presence of the English team has something to do with this increased interest.

We expect the strongest opposition from the relay teams of Pennsylvania and Cornell.

H. R. Crowell Elected Captain of Tech Team

At the final dinner of the Tech wrestling team in the Tech Union, H. R. Crowell, '15, of Los Angeles was elected captain after J. Kelly, the present captain, announced that he would not again be a candidate. H. G. Morse of Dorchester was elected manager, Dean Burton congratulated the men on winning the championship of the Eastern States. Captain Kelly, Manager Smyth-Martin, W. Trent, C. Hall, Roderick C. Tait, Captain Hoffman of the freshman team, also spoke. A picture of the team will be hung in the Tech Union.

"A Far Country," Winston Churchill's greatest and latest novel, is based on the biblical quotation concerning the prodigal son: "and took his journey into a far country and there wasted his substance with riotous living." NEW RECORDS SURE TODAY AT PENN CARNIVAL

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—This city is full of young men of the athletic type who are here in anticipation of the University of Pennsylvania relay carnival, which is to be held on Franklin Field today.

Never in the twenty years since the introduction of this annual fixture has the interest been so great, the increased importance being due partially to the presence for the first time of a team of runners from Oxford University.

The Englishmen finished their training well satisfied with their condition and though no time trials have been made public, the smooth movements of the Oxonians have made it clear to onlookers that a new record for the four miles will be necessary if Oxford is to be beaten.

YANKEES BANK ON CORNELL.

The chief hope of an American victory lies in the Cornell team and though Trainer Jack Moakley has been as secretive as the English captain as to the real form of the Ithacan four, it has become known that in one trial of the team the slowest man traveled the mile in 4.20.

That means considerable speed for the leaders and with the reputation of Cornell as a producer of distance runners to sustain it is reasonably sure of coming somewhere near the time that the Britishers are expected to make.

Pennsylvania also has a strong team with two tried men, McCurdy and Bladeira as the stars, and since Meredith has been forced to withdraw from the one-mile event all the efforts of the local university will be turned toward giving the invading team a fight in the four miles.

RECORDS IN DANGER.

Only fine weather is required to break records in the championships a probability. Both the two-mile and one-mile races are more open than in previous years, and in the former event it is common talk that Dartmouth, Princeton, Chicago, Virginia and Michigan possess teams equal to running inside the record figures made by Michigan in winning last year.

In the one-mile Cornell, Illinois and Harvard all have teams far above the average, and a close contest is expected, in which the winning team will be forced to lower the intercollegiate record of 3.21 2-5.

Casselman President of Tech Rifle Club

At a meeting of the Tech Rifle Club, E. J. Casselman was elected president, to take the place of G. G. Haslam, who has resigned. Haslam was announced the winner of the pistol given for a prize in the reentry pistol shoot. He made a score of 97. Dunn was second with 96 and Macdonald came in third with a 94 score. In preparation of the outdoor intercollegiate competition the club will hold a practice relay at Walker Hill. Prospects for a successful outdoor season are better than they were last year when the team finished third in class A.

ANNAPOLIS Md., April 25.—The Harvard and Navy first and second eights race here today and the general impression is a double victory for the Combridge, Mass., oarsmen. Beaten last week by the University of Pennsylvania, the Navy lads have not had the opportunity of getting as much work as they need this week and are clearly below their usual form.

The visiting crews are closely matched in weight and strength, and, apparently, in form.

The race is over the Henley distance of a mile and five-sixteenths, and the present plan is to start all four crews at once.

Outlaws Are Ready to Quit Court War

CHICAGO, April 25.—The Federal League has given up its plans for making a court fight to regain Baumgardner, Williams and Kahler and other players with the exception of Schlitzer, according to a statement made by President Gilmore.

The league will ask Judge Sessions of the United States Court for the Western District of Maryland, for a re-hearing of its case against Killefer, and should the judge refuse it the league will appeal to the Supreme Court. Otherwise the league will let the courts alone.

The Thrilling Attack on the Mill in "WAR," the Great Motion Picture Serial

One of Nell Brinkley's Prettiest Pictures

Helen and Warren Spend an Evening at the "Movies"

THE AMERICAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

Mabel Herbert Urner's Great Series:

Their Married Life

After an Evening at the Moving Pictures Helen Declares She Would Like to Write Scenarios.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

WARREN scowled at the array of highly colored posters that graced the front of Ketchem's Moving Picture Palace.

"Nothing but thrillers. Come on, there's another place up here. Let's see what they've got."

The bright lights of another "movie" house shone out a block or so ahead. But as they drew near the flaming posters proclaimed even more spectacular films.

Apparently the star feature was "The Viper's Fangs," and the lithographs showed a hair-raising scene of a man, tied and gagged, being lowered over the side of a vessel into the black waters beneath, while a shrieking woman, with flowing hair, was held back by swarthy sailors.

Warren viewed this work of art with a grount.

"Well, what shall we do? Try another place or take a chance here?"

"Oh, I suppose they're all about the same," answered Helen. "And there aren't any more near hear, are there?"

"Don't stand in the aisles, please. Keep within the fire lines!" called the usher, as they entered the darkened, crowded house.

Helen clung to Warren's arm and stood on tip-toes trying to see over the shoulders of those standing in front of her.

The picture on the screen was an elaborately furnished library with a man in evening dress in excited controversy with a younger man in shabby clothes.

"Dear, maybe we could get seats upstairs," suggested Helen, who hated to stand in a crowd.

A RUSH FOR SEATS

"Oh, we'll get seats when this picture's over. ,What's it all about any way? One of those three reelers?"

"Is that man her husband?" Helen had been trying to make out the story. "And whose child is that?"

The film ended abruptly on a scene in which the older man signs a paper, and the woman falls on her knees before him.

As the picture flashed off there was a general stir, and a dozen or more people came up the aisle. But those standing ahead made a rush for the best seats.

"If they'd only have the seats reserved," complained Helen, as they had to go far down in front. "I'd think everybody would be willing to pay a little more to avoid this scramble."

"Miranda's Beau, a Comedy," was the next picture, a roaring slap-stick farce, at which Warren laughed and which put the house in an uproar.

Then came "An Artist's Find." The first picture showed an attic studio, a sick wife and the artist, who has received an order for a small picture. Having no money to buy the canvas he starts out to pawn his overcoat.

"Oh, this is taken in Paris," whispered Helen, as the artist passed a street cafe on his way to the pawnshop. "It's in the Latin Quarters, too —don't you remember that corner?" eagerly. "Dear, I think we've been in that very cafe."

"Oh, you can't tell—all those street places look alike."

Having pawned his overcoat, the artist stops at a curio shop, where he selects from a pile of old canvases one of the dealed size. He takes it home, washes off the landscape slab, and finds underneath a Madonna by an old painter. But threadbare as was this story, the street scenes and settings were real and the parts well acted.

"Dear, we're so near, it hurts my eyes. Can't we get further back now? Look, there are some seats back there across the aisle."

Warren, who hated crawl out over people, grumblingly gathered up his stick, hat and overcoat.

A FEUD STORY

The next was a Kentucky feud story, lurid with revenge. Helen moved restlessly. She hated the constant shooting emphasized by the banging of the kettle-drum.

"You are too blamed critical," commented Warren. "Those Western plants have to do something with their companies."

"But this isn't a Western picture."

"It isn't, eh? That's a California ranch, and those Kentucky moonshiners are the cowboys that used to swagger around with fur breeches and six-shooters. Now they've switched over to rifles, rusty frock coats, illicit distilleries and 'feuds.' Wonder how they'll work in the horses. Must have been a pretty hard blow to those chaps when the public got tired of watching 'em ride."

They did work in the horses in a thrilling ambush scene, and Helen clutched Warren's arm as a horse was shot down with his rider.

"Oh, that's brutal! It oughtn't to be allowed," in an indignant whisper. "How DARE they shoot horses just to make pictures."

"Now just simmer down—that's a trick horse."

The opening scene of the next film was laid in an office, with an impressive array of typewriters, letter files and safes. The plot then broadened out.

"Dear, he's rather good. He's very natural, don't you think?" as the man dictated a letter to his stenographer.

"Pish. Girl's not bad either, but she can't fake her typewriting. Too many leaders," as another caption was flashed on. "Why don't they let the pictures tell the story?"

"And the wording's so stilted—Carl Grisom is a Suitor for the Hand of Ruth,'" read Helen. "Why not 'Carl Wants to Marry Ruth'?—that's simpler."

"That's good photography," declared Warren. "Good lighting up act," as a butler entered a darkened room and turned up the light.

A well taken picture always appealed to Warren. He was a good amateur photographer, and was quick to appreciate any special effects in focus and lighting.

"Ain't that the same man we saw in that feature film last night?" asked a woman's voice behind them.

"Yes; and he's got on that same fur overcoat."

Helen looked at the fur-lined coat which the man threw to the butler with a lordly air, and wondered in how many pictures it had served.

The next scene showed Ruth, weak from lack of food, falling in the snow, and being driven over by the sleigh of her former employer.

"Oh, how could they get that?" for the picture showed Ruth falling, showed the sleigh passing over her arm, and then her efforts to arise.

"Substituted a dummy when the sleigh ran over her. Didn't you see that slight hitch? Clever work, too," approved Warren.

Then came the announcement of the spectacular feature—"The Viper's Fangs."

"We'll pass that up," Warren arose. "Guess we've had our ten cents' worth—come on."

Helen pinned on her hat and they made their way out.

"Pretty good show," as he paused in the lobby to button his coat.

"And some of those films were very expensive," reflected Helen.

"The photography and the settings were all fine."

Helen took his arm impulsively. "Dear, everybody's writing scenarios —why shouldn't we try "

Warren sniffed.

AN IDEA

"Well, we could write better stories than we've seen tonight."

" That wouldn't be doing a whole lot."

"Oh, if we could only write some REAL stories," persisted Helen. "Not spectacular films, but stories of every-day life. A young couple starting housekeeping, for instance. Show them renting their apartment, buying furniture, fixing it up—all the little domestic incidents. Wouldn't that be interesting?"

"Um-m, but where-s your story?"

"Oh, I haven't thought it out, but I'm sure a story COULD be worked out along those lines."

"It's not what the people want. The thrillers, the blood-and-thunder, general bullabaloo drop—that's what they're after."

"Dear, I don't believe it is! I don't believe it's what the people want. I'm sure if somebody would write a series of domestic stories that were REAL—Oh, I KNOW they'd make an appeal. If only I could write them!" wistfully.

"Well, since about nine-tenths of the populace are trying to write for the movies, I guess the compass can worry along without your contributions."

Yet all the way home in the subway Helen's mind was filled with vague illusive ideas, which she felt held alluring possibilities of fame and fortune, if they could only be crystalized into moving pictures.

Do You Know That

For the first time on record news bulletins taken by wireless were recently displayed on a moving train, when passengers on the Lackawanna Railroad were astonished to see the latest foreign and home dispatches spread before their eyes as they were being whirled along at sixty miles an hour. The Scranton Times sent 250 words from its Lackawanna wireless station to the moving train, the messages dealing with internal and external affairs. A few days previously the same railway company successfully experimented with the transmission by wireless of running orders to a train staff.

The fees of counsel for the defence in the alleged "poisoning" trial at Kieff amounted to about $250,000.

Some years ago a cyclist undertook to ride one hundred miles daily every week day for a year, and accomplished the feat. A still more remarkable record is that of Mr. F. J. Lucas, of Coventry, England, who has for twenty years been riding an average of fifty miles a day. He has covered the aggregate of over 365,000 miles since September, 1893, when he started on a cycle to Wolverhampton and Northampton on alternate days.

A postman named Mr. T. Anderson, who has had charge of deliveries in the rural area of Carlisle, gave some statistics of the ground he had covered in acknowledging a presentation made to him on his retirement. Mr. Anderson stated that during his forty-six years' service he had walked a total distance of 145,000 miles. His periodical crossing of the wide bridge spanning the Eden at Carlisle had amounted in the aggregate to 6,000 miles.

Surprises are in store for the knight of the jimmy who tackles the newest burglar-proof safe. Not only will the lightest touch on the safe set bells ringing, but it will also automatically switch on a light on the roof of the house which the burglar is burgling, thus indicating to the nearest policeman exactly where he is wanted.

The Audience Was Thrilled And Appreciative, Too

By NELL BRINKLEY

CLIPPING from a criticism—"The stage box was occupied by the elite of the town. The play itself was a decided success. It held the audience spellbound from start to finish—from the lifting of the curtain on the first act to the strong, well-acted climax. Its dialogue delightful—its story old, but clothed in new and charming language—its stars a marvelous couple of young people, whose names will be the toast of the town from this night forth! At the great scene the audience held its breath—thrilled and appreciative!"

The elite is there a'right—and you can "hear a pin drop" or the rustle of a cramped fat leg in a starched romper. The elite is there—and the ingredients of the elite are—one ragged blue pup with a continual smile and a great affection for everyoney in his family—a lanky small chap with his hair up-ended, his shoes scuffed, a peeled nose and one talent (and that is delivering "Horatius at the Bridge" on the last day of school with an unbelievable ferocity), chapped little fists, and a vast appreciation of the play—one atom of a kid who squats on his heels with his plump fists clutched around his tummy, who has to be dug and nudged and gritted at because his deeply smiling face and scrutched shoulders show an alarming likelihood of a terrible giggle "fat fustin' out—one delightful small girl who has just read "The Crushed Lady" behind her geography, who tosses her taffy curls back over her shoulders and switches her skirts when she passes the "new Boy," whose small heart dimly understands some minutes and scoffs at others—one other bit-laddie with eyes like his big sister, one first tooth gone (and he can whistle through it 'til it tears the sky apart and his sister demands his life-blood), and his eyes are very wide with wonder at the ways of grown-up maids and men, and he's forgotten to even whisper a whistle through the treasured place of his vanished tooth. This is the audience—thrilled and appreciative! And the players—the twin bright stars—are a big sister and her very best beau, who just words a halting, breathless, ardent, "I—I love you—do YOU love me?"—NELL BRINKLEY.

CHAPTER SIX.

THERE was barely a moment's delay in operations. The next minute the entire troop of men with George Modzel at their head dashed up the steps of the mill in a second attempt to take the enemy by storm.

Hardy on the inside was ready for them, however, and, opening the door, he hurled his second bomb in their midst. The men staggered back, and George Modzel fell heavily on the steps. A moment before he had been alive and well, pulsing with ambition and the excitement of the moment, now what remained of him was carried carefully over to a place of safety; he was still alive, but mortally wounded, and his time was short. In some unaccountable way his delirium had carried him back to Lisely Cottage, and for a time he raved madly, talking in disjointed sentences of his mother and of Helene. Lieutenant Maxim, who headed the scouting party, remained close by his side in the hope that before his death he would be able to give them some kind of a message to deliver to his family, but it hardly seemed likely that he would gain his proper senses at all. Things looked very dark just at present.

Suddenly he raised his head from the ground, and Lieutenant Maxim, at the expression in his eyes, saw that he had regained consciousness, a total distance of 145,000 miles. His periodical crossing of the wide bridge spanning the Eden at Carlisle had amounted in the aggregate to 6,000 miles.

Lieutenant Maxim laid his head back gently, as he straightened. But he struggled up again, his eyes wild, and pointed toward the mill. "Get him!" he shouted, "get him!" and then fell back on the ground.

George Modzel was dead.

"We'll get him," said Lieutenant Maxim through clenched teeth, "but the question is, how? Have any of you any suggestions to make? We'll have to use strategy of some kind to get the best of him!" Then he pointed excitedly to a load of hay that lay on the other side of the road, a little in the distance.

"Roll the hay wagon over here," he commanded. "We'll use it for a shield and make the attack that way. If we can get near the foundations he won't dare to use his bombs at such close range, and we'll blow the mill to pieces before he'll have an idea of what's happening."

The men rushed over to the hay wagon and rolled it across the road and over on the grass. As many as five could push the wagon from behind without being seen from the front at all, and the rest would follow as best they could. Any bombs that Hardy might use would have immediate effect upon the hay, and in the general excitement one of their number would be able to reach the mill unhurt. Besides, there was always the possibility of the bombs going wild, and doing no damage at all, at least none to amount to anything. It was just as well to look on the bright side of things, and with the hope of victory and the bulky proportions of the hay wagon between themselves and the bomb explosives of the enemy, the men had all taken a fresh lease on life.

"We'll need about five of the most destructive bombs," said the lieutenant finally, after ways and means had been discussed for a few minutes, "placed in the foundations. Each of us can carry one, and I will creep up when we are near enough to make a forward dash reasonably safe, and fix the bombs and light the fuse. We'll have to fix it that way," he added, as the men demurred at the risk he was taking, "because we'll be at too close range to throw them, and there will be no opportunity for more than one man to get underneath the mill. I might as well be the one to take the risk as any of you."

There were a few final instructions and then the huge hay cart was rolled rapidly over the ground toward the vantage point of the enemy. Hardy waited grimly, a bomb in each hand, but it did not stop as he thought. It would, and from sheer surprise he did not hurt the bomb that he had ready until the wagon was in such a position as to spoil his aim. The bomb went wild, the hay on one side caught fire, but no one was hurt, and under cover of the smoke Lieutenant Maxim made his way up to the mill with his materials. Hardy hurled his second bomb and the hay cart instantly went up in flames, leaving the man exposed and entirely at the mercy of the enemy. Lieutenant Maxim had done his work well. Through the smoke he fought his way blindly back to the men, and with a shout of triumph they made for safety.

Hardy in the meantime, utterly at a loss to understand what had happened, paused in his preparation of the next bomb to gaze open-mouthed at the sudden retreat of the enemy.

Outside, there was a sudden puff of smoke curling out from the bottom of the mill, a thin sheet of flame and then a series of explosions and a roar as the walll tottered for a few minutes on its foundations, and then with a final crash tipped over and crumbled to pieces.

War indeed, in all its naked horror. But with Adolph Hardy buried far beneath the piles of smoking wreckage, Dawsbergen's injuries had at last been avenged.

(Chapter Seven on Monday.)

Her Awkward Position

Flaxen and forty was Gretchen H. Schmidt, but her chief happiness in life lay in the belief that she looked but twenty.

Dressed in her most fetching getup, she tripped along to the bank to change a cheque that a kindly providence had wafted in her direction. Incidentally, be it remembered, Gretchen H. S. had her own views on the attractions of the bank cashier.

Smiling the approved dentine smile, at the danger of the loss of her false teeth, she approached the bank counter, and boldly endorsed her cheque "Gretchen Schmidt."

"Will you cash dis for me?" she inquired of the cashier.

"I'm afraid you have not endorsed this quite correctly," he said, pointing to her signature. "You have forgotten the 'H.'"

Gretchen blushed furiously.

"Is it dat it is necessaire?" she asked.

"Yes, madame; it must be quite accurate and written in full."

With trembling hand, amid tears of mortification, Gretchen H. S. wrote: "Age forty-one."

WHY FOREIGNERS SOLD.

Persons who expected the war to have a bull influence are saying that the circumstance which has published their forecast to date has been selling by foreigners of American stocks to an unexpected extent. Europeans are more familiar with the costs and horrors of war than the people of this country, who have gone through with but one great one in a hundred years. A comparatively small area of the United States has ever been overrun by an enemy. In Europe, aside from Russia, there are not many acres which at some time or another have not been trodden by invaders. That is one reason why European peasants prefer hoarding money to leaving it in banks when they hear the echo of cannon. They would rather know their francs or marks are hidden in a hole in the garden than to endure fear some bank may be looted by a foe.

The health of Emperor Franz Joseph is causing alarm. For years it has been believed by many that the death of this much beloved monarch, often called the "last of the Hapsburgs," would cause disintegration of his empire. It comprises many nationalities, and they are of many creeds, including Turkish and Slav. If the Emperor, who has held such discordant elements together for many years, should die, a war might follow which would render the recent conflict in the Balkans of small consequence in comparison. France, Germany, Russia are filling their war chests and absorbing all the gold they can get from other countries. Russia and Germany have conflicting interests in the large districts of Austria and Hungary. There are rumors that friction exists even now. France is an ally of Russia. They are opposed to the Triple Alliance. Uneasiness of Europeans are to their situation on their own continent has doubtless something to do with the selling of stocks, as well as the war between the great United States, with its stupendous resources in land, men and money, and Mexico, which is peopled mostly by barbarians who cannot develop its wealth and whose credit does not inspire confidence on the part of leaders, to say the least.

PUBLIC SERVICE INVESTMENTS.

It is estimated that the amount of capital invested in public service corporations in this country foots up to nearly $35,000,000,000 and in 1913 the gross earnings of about 200 of them totalled around $850,000,000, or $55,000,000 more than in 1912. The surplus of public service corporations for last year increased 3½ per cent., compared with increase for the previous one. According to figures by the Financial World, the 236 corporations it covers in its compilations disbursed to investors in interest on bonds, including all other charges, $150,223,407, which was $10,757,446 more than the year ago. Sold in dividends $120,777,354, which was $5,881,042 greater.

The surplus over all charges shows a smaller ratio of increase, because the companies increased their bonded debt by $87,820,750. The charges on which cut into surplus.

The various railroads and public companies have outstanding $2,151,842,261 in bonds. $87,820,793 more than in 1912; preferred stock of $1,000,000,950, which is $18,821,721 greater, and common stock of $2,216,786,418, an increase of $22,592,052.

The War Really Serious---Every Man Knows It Now

Every Intelligent Man Might Have Foreseen It. There Will Be the Only Possible Outcome—Complete Victory and Complete Annexation of All Mexico to the United States

How we got into the war historians will tell. Whether we slipped into it, or skidded, or fell in, with charming, desultory peace talk—while Mexico committed murders—will be made plain by those that write history.

One thing is sure, the historian will write, among other things, this. He will say: "The war was much shorter than the experts of Europe predicted. The Mexican people gradually came to realize that they were fighting their own inevitable future in fighting the United States.

"The war was conducted by the United States as humanely as possible, with great reluctance to injure the Mexican people, misled by bandit rulers.

"And the complete annexation of all Mexican territory by the United States at the close of the war was soon recognized by the Mexicans themselves as the best and only thing that could have happened."

The news of the war is sad, as all news of death and suffering must be.

Mexican convicts released in hundreds at Vera Cruz and shooting at our sailors and marines do not make a pretty picture of warfare.

But the American people will know that war methods in Mexico are bound to be as low as the average of education and tradition in Mexico.

We are fighting there a nation whose national pastimes are bloody—bull fighting for the big excitement, cock fighting for the minor happiness—and we shall expect bloody methods in war and bloody reprisals when occasionally accident may put our men in the Mexicans' power.

The people of this country will not lose their temper or their equanimity. They know what war is and what Mexico is. Men who have been treacherously murdering each other, ruthlessly butchering unarmed peons and their women and children, will not be civilized in war.

They will be warned fully by our government and foul methods will be punished, of course, in a way to impress those in power—punishment of the biggest men in the country, not merely of irresponsible released convicts or full-blood Indians urged to atrocity.

Cleaning up such a place as Mexico cannot be a pleasant task. It will not be easy. It will not be cheap—in money or in life.

But we have the men eager to face the danger—which is the ONE GREAT THING IN WAR—and we have the minor things needed, money, ships, guns and scientific knowledge.

The task into which we originally drifted, but which the nation now solemnly ratifies and makes its own, will be carried through as our other wars and undertakings have been carried through, from the work in 1776 to the building of the Panama Canal.

Among other things, this war, of course, will settle automatically the suggestion that Europe be allowed to control at Panama. The people at present are in no mood to hear of foreign nations' rights here on the American continent. There will not be found many men, we presume, to vote at this time to take from American ships the right to use the Panama Canal—also American—as this country may see fit.

Shipments of arms into Mexico have presumably been stopped everywhere before now. That such shipments were ever permitted was regretted by those who knew that war with ALL of Mexico was inevitable and therefore opposed sending arms to ANY MEXICAN FACTION.

The mistake is emphasized by the news that all the bandits of Mexico have united against the civilization of this country.

But no time will be wasted in talking of mistakes or in criticising anybody. There is work to be done, and it will be promptly attended to, including the rectifying of all mistakes.

We shall conquer all of Mexico, all of the bandits, ANNEX ALL OF MEXICO, civilize gradually all of the bandits, and in the right way.

The noblest motto of all we take for our nation: "THE WORLD IS MY COUNTRY; TO DO GOOD IS MY RELIGION."

We assure the Mexicans that our sentiments are expressed exactly in those few words. But we are specialists in government and attend to things even to noble mottoes, one part at a time.

The world is our country, and we are going to increase its size right away, by adding the entire Mexican territory.

To do good is our religion, and we shall do good to the Mexicans, as soon as we have made Mexico our country. That, we hope, will sound reasonable to the nations.

We are in the war and have a long and hard fight ahead.

We shall stick at it patiently until the work is done, realizing that the region of banditry and lawlessness to the south must be eliminated for all time. When the war is over Mexico will be part of the United States, Mexicans will be citizens of the United States—and proud of it, when they take time to think it over.

Under our government every man's work will be worth more, and he will be paid for it, not made to work as a serf.

Under our government education will replace ignorance and vile superstition, Mexico will be civilized.

Life will be safe, property will be secure, prosperity will be increased. Our government will do for the land NOW CALLED MEXICO what we have done for land that used to be Mexico.

You know in the United States the States, happy and prosperous, which are now called California, Nevada, Texas, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado.

Seventy-one years ago EVERY ONE OF THESE STATES WAS MEXICAN TERRITORY, and they were as miserable, ignorant, backward parts of the world as Mexico is today. Ask the citizen of California, Texas, Arizona or any of them, if he could would he now go back to Mexican rule. What he says to you today, those now living in Mexico will say a few years from now when asked whether they regret that their country was conquered and made part of this land.

"A happier Mexico and a bigger United States," is the toast of the day.

Our Vast Resources in Nature

By ELBERT HUBBARD

THE world's supply of coal will be exhausted, at the present rate of consumption, in 200 years. The supply of iron will be gone in 100 years.

Three-fourths of the oil wells in Pennylvania that once produced are now dry. A hundred years ago whale oil was the one illuminant.

In 1854 Colonel Drake is digging deep for salt "struck ile."

In 1876 Edison sent a current of electricity through a vacuum, and thereby confounded the Sedona who declared that there could be no light without combustion, and no combustion without oxygen.

Edison got his light without either, and thereby proved that light was a form of energy and that energy was transmutable into different forms.

Petroleum is a deposit. It is stored-up fish oil, distilled and preserved in Nature's laboratory. You empty the pocket and you exhaust the supply.

But electricity is elemental and indestructible. We use it over and over, and, like water, it traverses earth, trees, animals, clouds and comes back again to our bidding.

Water is the natural mate of electricity. They go together. Franklin with his kite and key, coaxing from the skies the secret of electricity, could only work in a thunderstorm.

Electricity has only one love, and that is water. And this love is reciprocated.

The children of this mating are the arts, industries, the homes, factories, parks, the ships that sail on the sea, sending out their searchlights, and receiving and sending wireless messages—all are born of negative and possitive attractions—wool, if you please, rubbed on amber.

Aye, man himself is an amphibian that has learned to breathe air. The beginning of every life is an unseen aqueous germ, vitalized by a saline solution carrying an electric current, liberated by contact.

So there you have it: The supply of iron is all in sight, and the building of the future will have to be of materials that are at hand. The wood is gone, but rock is plentiful. The rocks of the Grand Canon could rebuild the cities of the world, and then the quarry would not be really opened!

The building material of the future will be concrete. The Egyptians knew the secret of concrete, and it died with them. They built their pyramids and colloal of mixed cement. We are now re-discovering this inexhaustible building material. Take courage.

The mountains, rock-ribbed and lasting as the sun, are nothing but concrete—God's concrete—mixed, melted and smelted by heat, pressure and time.

Man can supply the heat and pressure, and he can eliminate the question of time and make granite in a day. Gneiss, feldspar, marble, quartz, granite are the acidents of energy.

Mind—human mind—has now evolved so that man, in degree, controls Nature.

And the way he controls Nature is by loving her, working with her, never opposing her.

Man can make pyramids and he can remove mountains. He can crumble the hills to dust, transport them to distant points and there reconstruct them.

But in the making of concrete water is an absolute necessity. Heat applied to water liberates energy, and this was the secret that fashioned the hills and gave form to the mountains.

Electricity is in its infancy. It is a coming science. While other things are costing more than formerly, electricity and electric appliances are getting cheaper all the time.

It is the march of progress.

An Englishman's Letters

From J. Percy Smith-Brown, Esquire, Hotel Pazazza, Boston, to H. Etherington Bellingham-Cholomondly (pronounced Chumly). The Towers, Chorlton-cum-Hardy, Cirencester, near Stoke-Panning-ton the Lesser, Hants, England.

DEAR OLD TOP—This is an extraordinary country, a dashed extraordinary country.

I was walking up the street when I met a quite decent looking old scout. He stared at me for more than a minute, and then came up and said, "I say, old man, didn't I jolly well run into you in the dear old Cecil last Summer? I knew you in a moment, old top; no mistaking your taste in togs."

You know I haven't been near the confounded Cecil since they had the dashed cheek to ask me to settle a bit of an account I had about three years ago, and I was going to ignore this fellow, when he asked me to have a bit of a drink. As luck would have it, we just happened to meet a friend of the fellow's, a bally agreeable sort of chap, too. We had a jolly high old time, my two acquaintances paying for everything. After a while they suggested that we match coins for the drinks, and I won every bally time.

One of the blighters then apparently got shirty. "Aw, this is a piker's game," he exclaimed. "Let's make it five dollars a corner."

This meant we put up a pound apiece, old chap. I had only one quid, but I thought I'd have a little flutter, and, strange to say, I won six times in succession, giving me a profit of twelve pounds, or sixty dollars in this beastly money. One of the fellows then suggested making it twenty pounds a corner, but I told them I had to hoof it along to bed.

For some reason or other the two bounders went right off the deep end. In coarse tones they shouted after me "sucker," "quitter," "piker," and a lot of other strange words. I had half a mind to jolly well chastise them, but they were such bally bounders that a gentleman really couldn't soil his hands on them. The blooming money was good, though. How was that for a little bit off the top?

By the bye, old top, the confounded taverns over here are deucedly odd. I felt like having a glass of bitter beer the other morning, so I strolled into a place and said, "A bit of bitter, my good man."

"I might get you a but of butter, my good guy," the person answered, "or possibly a bat of batter, but nothing doing on bits of bitter."

Extraordinary conduct, I call it. And then as I was leaving the confounded place, the bar person shouted after me "I could also give you some bits of bitters." Fact, 'pon my honour.

I crushed the impertinent fellow, I fancy, by saying, "Don't offer bitters to your betters."

Rather neat, eh? You might see if you can do anything with it for punch. If you do, ask them to post me the cheque direct.

Now, dear old chap, it's awfully annoying to me to have to be writing so often about the miserable couple of pounds which I have asked you to put on the Derby favourite for me. If you don't put it up for me this week, I shall have to ask some other fellow to do so, and in view of our long palship I should dislike this very much.

Your old pal, Percy,

Science Problems

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q. "If a weight of one pound on earth be taken to the planet Mercury would it increase its weight there three-fourths; and if taken to Neptune would it not decrease?"

A. A stone weighing one pound on the earth taken to Mercury would weigh 14 ounces and to Neptune 14.4 ounces.

Q. "What diameter in feet and inches does the sun's disk appear to possess to the average eye? How large does the disk of the moon appear to the normal eye?

A. Both disks—those of the sun and moon—at the average of all days in the year, subtend 2 minutes of an arc, or angular measure. Never given in feet or inches.

Q. "Is it not velocity that produces gravitation? If we throw a stone against a window of sufficient resistance with too little velocity, it will not break; but if we throw it with sufficient velocity the window will break?"

A. We do not know the cause of gravitation, nor of anything; but the increased speed of a stone thrown is not the cause of gravitation; it is the cause of momentum, which is a product of mass multiplied by velocity.

Momentum would be the same if the stone were thrown close to the earth, where its full attraction of its gravitation would be felt; or out in space trillions of miles, where the earth's gravitation would be almost infinitesimal. That is, the glass would break by increasing the speed of the stone as here on earth.
